Thousands of abuse victims ask for help in aftermath of Savile case

By Marijke Cox
marijke.cox@archant.co.uk

WIDESPREAD claims of horrific abuse at the hands of disgraced TV star Jimmy Savile have sparked a flood of calls to victim support groups.

Organisations that help sufferers of sexual abuse say the high-profile case has stirred up painful memories for victims of their suffering at the hands of their attackers.

Experts say the Savile scandal had also given some victims the courage to speak out for the first time about historic abuse, having hidden it for decades.

Rape crisis centre Family Matters, which offers counselling to victims across Kent, has seen a surge in calls.

Operations director Malcolm Gilbert said the most noticeable effect was the rise in applications from new clients for therapy.

"Incidentally, one or two past clients have come back to us because the Savile issues have stirred up old stuff," he said.

"In fact we have just had a visit from an ex-client who felt her therapy with us had transformed her life and she is glad the issues with Jimmy Savile are out there because, in her view, it's empowering more victims to come forward and seek help to be a survivor and not a victim, as she now sees herself."

He added: "As more people are apparently seeking help then something good will come from the high-profile nature of this abuse."

"It will shake our complacency and help us understand how prevalent this abuse is and how we must be constantly vigilant to its existence."

Mr Gilbert said Family Matters, based in Gravesend but catering for the whole county, had not yet been able to process

More than 2,000 victims ask for help in wake of Savile exposé

all its new applications, but the charity was not aware of any of them involved victims of Savile.

Scotland Yard is pursuing up to 340 lines of inquiry about Savile and alleged abuse of girls aged between 13 and 16 over four decades.

The former Radio 1 DJ, who presented Top of the Pops and Jim'll Fix It, died last October aged 84.

Veteran Tory MP Sir Roger Gale, who worked at the BBC during the height of Savile's fame, last week said action should be taken against those who knew what was going on.

The Thanet North MP said: "If senior people in the corporation, up to and including the current director-general, were in the know then action should be taken against them."

Since allegations about Savile came out, questions have been raised about the 'locker room' culture at the BBC during the 60s, 70s and 80s, with further claims of abuse at the hands of others working there.

"If it was as rife as it appears to have been someone must have known what was going on in that BBC department," said Sir Roger.

Chief executive of the National Association for People Abused in Childhood (NAPAC), Peter Saunders, from Bromley, said there had been a huge rise in the number of people calling the helpline.

He said in a normal week the organisation received 200-300 calls.

But since the Savile exposé on ITV just over two weeks ago there have been more than 2,000 calls from victims.

"There will be cases when people never come forward. It's the nature of the crime," said Mr Saunders.

"Long before this exposé, victims would have kept the sexual abuse they suffered a secret, for 20, 30, 40 years, sometimes longer.

"One of the many devastating effects of abuse is the feeling of isolation it creates. That's what abusers do to their victims. "The soaring numbers coming forward (after the Savile revelations) is an issue of 'safety in numbers'.

"People don't feel so isolated and feel the courage to speak out."

He added: "This has made society wake up to what sexual abuse can do to a child and the consequences it has in their lives."

A spokeswoman for charity Victim Support, which has a centre in Ashford, said it did not yet have recent call figures, but encouraged anyone affected by the revelations to get in touch.

"We can help people any time after the crime has happened, whether it was yesterday, last week or several years ago," she said.

"We therefore can support anyone who has been affected by alleged crimes relating to Jimmy Saville or indeed anyone who has had memories of other abuse brought back by this high-profile case."

ECONOMY

Report finds signs of economic growth as property market bucking UK trend

By Nick Ames

nick.ames@archant.co.uk

THE value of residential and commercial property in Kent remains above the national average despite the impact of the economic slump, according to a major new report.

The 21st annual Kent Property Market Report – which reviews the county's commercial, retail, tourism, rural and residential property markets, and its regeneration programmes – does show some optimism, but confirms growth is slow.

But plans to boost economic growth and create jobs, as well as the recent upgrading of transport links to London, are a boost to economic prospects, says the report prepared by Kent County Council, Cluttons, and Locate in Kent.

The average value of properties on the residential market are 0.2 per cent ahead of last year, according to figures from the Land Registry – but this is driven partially by demand for large homes in prosperous parts of the west of the county.

Elsewhere, compared to the rest of the UK, Kent's performance is favourable – albeit in a subdued financial climate.

Retail warehousing is showing a rental growth of 1.2 per cent, following its above-average growth of one per cent in 2010, while rents were still falling at a regional level. The Kent industrial market saw its pace of rental decline slowed to 0.6 per cent from 0.9 – again better than elsewhere in the UK.

Retail has suffered from the economic downturn and is currently fighting against internet consumer trading – but the rate of rental falls has slowed, falling by 1.8 per cent in 2011, compared to a fall of 6.5 per cent in 2010.

Initiatives are in place to promote growth,

MOVING UP:

With faster rail services now available the county is becoming an attractive proposition to investors such as the purchase of the former Pfizer site in Sandwich by Discovery Park Limited, while businesses with growth ambitions in the east of the county, including Canterbury, Thanet, Dover, and Shepway, can apply for zero per cent loans from the £35 million Regional Growth Fund.

But as the report was unveiled at Kings Hill this week, delegates were quick to promote what they saw as positives.

Sue Foxley, head of research, at estate agents Cluttons, said: "There is no doubt the economic outlook in the UK is challenging and this is reflected in our report.

"However, there are emerging areas of growth in the South East economy and these are reflected in Kent's high growth business sectors. These present an attractive investment story for the county's property market looking forward."

Paul Wookey, chief executive of Locate in Kent, added: "It is clear from our enquiries that the county is reaping the benefits of recent infrastructure and development investment including faster rail services from Ashford, north Kent, east Kent and London on High Speed 1.

"Given our proximity to the capital and transport links, Kent is ideally placed to benefit from investors looking for locations with potential for growth."

PCC candidate branded 'curiously lightweight' over YouTube video

By Marijke Cox

marijke.cox@archant.co.uk

CONTENDERS in the upcoming Police and Crime Commissioner race say a high-profile rival has hit a bum note after she released a campaign video on YouTube featuring a parody of Gilbert and Sullivan's Mayor-General song.

They said the clip, uploaded by the team behind independent candidate Ann Barnes, was "curiously lightweight".

In the song, the original words are replaced with lyrics explaining her manifesto and why the public should vote for her in the November election.

But her rivals have accused her of not taking the election seriously enough.

Independent candidate Dai Liyanage, former Lib Dem Mayor of Medway, said: "We all like a laugh but the post of PCC is too serious to be the target of a joke, even one that falls flat."

"Gilbert and Sullivan were mildly subversive comedians a time long gone. If this is the message Ann Barnes thinks will impress the voters, then what does it say about her judgement?"

Tory candidate and Medway councillor Craig Mackinlay called it a "curiously lightweight approach to what is a serious election".

But Mrs Barnes, former chair of the Kent Police Authority, accused her rivals of having "no sense of humour".

"The song was a present from friends who thought it would cheer me up while I was in the middle of my campaign," she said. "We thought it was great so I put it on my website. The lyrics talk about my manifesto."

"I'm taking this whole thing very seriously – I may not take myself too seriously, but this election is something I'm working very hard on and taking extremely seriously."

"These are destructive comments they're making. They have no sense of humour."

"The problem here is these candidates are so steeped in politics they are using the old, tired ping-pong adversarial politics and I'm not playing their game. If that's the only thing they have to say then how sad is that?"

The film takes on the Gilbert and Sullivan song I Am The Very Model of a Modern Major-General and replaces the title lyrics with "she is the very model of a very Kentish police commissioner".

The PCC election is being held on Thursday, November 15. Everybody eligible to vote can do so and the person elected will replace the Kent Police Authority on November 22.

An official list of candidates will be announced this week.

The PCC will replace the Kent Police Authority, which currently holds the chief constable to account and decides the force's budget and policing priorities.

The successful candidate, who will be paid a salary of

CANDIDATE:

£85,000, will have the power to hire and fire the chief constable, set the police budget, write and publish a police and crime plan, and commission services.

The chief constable will remain responsible for operational matters but the PCC will decide how policing money is spent.

➔ Historic rape charges

A WEST Malling man has been charged with raping two women more than 20 years ago.

Ian John Phipps, 49, of Hurricane Road, was arrested on Tuesday, October 16, and charged by police the next day.

Phipps was charged by police officers from the Kent and Essex Serious Crime Directorate with the rape of a woman at Halling in 1986, and the rape of another woman at Wrotham Hill in 1991.

➔ Native oyster wins gold

THE Whitstable Native has been crowned the best British oyster. Ten types of oyster were gobbled down by 19 industry experts including famous fish chef Rick Stein, critic Tom Parker-Bowles, as well as Richard Corrigan, Charles Campion and Xante Clay. The gold medals for the two categories Native oyster and Rock oyster were won by the Whitstable and the Cumbrae respectively, at the second annual Boisdale & Wright Brothers Oyster Tasting Championship.

➔ Shots fired at M20 cars

A SNIPER with an air rifle has been shooting at cars, say police after one person was hurt.

Motorists were targeted on the London-bound M20 at the junction with the M26. Three reports were made to police on Tuesday, October 16, about incidents between 6-7pm. In one attack, the front passenger window of a Peugeot 206 was smashed. The shattered glass cut the driver's face and the pellet hit his arm.

DEATH

Tributes paid to 'Mr Reliable' who died refereeing youth team match

A REFEREE collapsed and died on the pitch in front of shocked youth football players.

Neil Conlon, 61, from River in Dover, collapsed into the arms of a team coach during a Kent Youth League game after saying he wasn't feeling well enough to continue running the match between Ramsgate and Hythe under-18s.

Paramedics were called to Southwood Stadium in Ramsgate and treated Mr Conlon on the pitch for more than an hour, but were unable to revive him. The cause of death is as yet unknown.

The former Melbourne Primary School headteacher, who had been a referee for 25 years, leaves his wife Sandra and two daughters. They laid flowers on the pitch when they visited the ground this week.

Kent Youth League chief executive Colin Boswell said: "He was the longest serving referee we had – he was Mr Reliable. He was such a positive man, and always helped young referees in their quest to get on."

"When picking officials for matches, he was the first on my list. If you asked him to go somewhere, he would do it – nothing was too much."

Kent FA referee development officer Nick Dunn said: "I was an assistant to him when I was going through the system and I did a few local games alongside him early in my career."

"He was a well-loved and respected man."

Mr Conlon was the chairman of the Dover branch of the Kent Referees' Association, and had also served as treasurer and secretary.

Branch secretary Mark Graham said: "He'd been involved for many years and I have known him for 10-15 years. He was Mr Football really – he would do anything for you and will be missed by everyone at the Dover branch."

Hythe FC said: "We would like to extend our sympathy and thanks to those who rendered assistance on Sunday and to both teams whose conduct was exemplary during that must have been a very difficult time for everybody."

Kent Youth League has told clubs to stage a minute's silence before their games this weekend.

The tragedy comes after a 15-year-old footballer from Ashford was recently rushed to hospital after his heart stopped during a game.

Galbu Sherpa collapsed twice while playing for Ashford United U16s, but swift action from two team coaches saved his life, according to paramedics.

Shortfall in grammar school places means a testing time for parents

By Marijke Cox

marijke.cox@archant.co.uk

THE battle is on for parents hoping to secure a place at one of the county's grammar schools following the release of the Kent and Medway Test results this week.

In Kent, 5,370 children were found suitable for grammar school out of the 11,451 who sat the test, previously called the 11-plus.

Some 1,298 of the successful youngsters live outside the county.

This 5,370 will now hope to secure one of 4,545 grammar school places in Kent for September, 2013, meaning up to 825 could miss out.

In Medway, 2,078 children sat the test, including those from outside the area, with 923 found suitable for grammar. There are 926 selective places available in Medway.

Parents applying for either grammar and non-grammar schools have until October 31 to make their preferred choices. Those in Kent can list four schools and in Medway, six.

Kent County Council cabinet member for education, learning and skills, Cllr Mike Whiting, said this was an important decision for parents.

"This can be an exciting and challenging time for children and families," he said.

"I would encourage any families who haven't yet decided which school to apply for, to talk to the primary headteachers about which schools would be best suited to meeting their child's educational needs."

Eight secondaries in Kent are deemed "super-selective", where they can give priority to children who scored the highest marks in the Kent or Medway Test.

Skinner's School in Tunbridge Wells; The Judd School in Tonbridge; Tonbridge Grammar School; Rochester Grammar School; Rainham Mark Grammar in Gillingham; Dartford Grammar School for Girls; and Simon Langton for Boys in Canterbury, are all deemed super-selective.

It means children who qualified for a grammar in those areas will not necessarily gain a place at one of these schools unless they scored over a certain target.

Education expert Peter Read, of Kent Independent Education Advice, offers support and information to parents going through the application process. He also assists with appeals.

He said in Medway there was a process following the test where parents were entitled to apply for a review of the decision.

This process is designed to select another two per cent of suitable children.

Parents are also entitled to appeal a school's decision not to accept a child.

"The important thing is that parents understand they can't appeal against a decision that finds their child non-selective," said Mr Read.

"What they can do is put a grammar school on the list of preferred choices (even if the child is not found suitable for grammar). On March 1 (when places are announced) they can then appeal against the school turning their child down. Alternative evidence can be put forward at this point."

Mr Read directed parents to his website for more information www.kentadvice.co.uk/home.

To download KCC's Admission to Secondary School in Kent 2013 booklet see www.kent.gov.uk, and to apply online go to www.kent.gov.uk/ola. For details of Medway's application process visit <http://bit.ly/WDCtmO>.

SO WHAT HAPPENS NOW?

■ The closing date to apply for a selective and non-selective secondary school place for September, 2013, in both Kent and Medway is Wednesday, October 31.

However, because of the October school holiday, applications received before 5pm on Monday, November 5, will be considered by Kent County Council to be on time.

■ The national offer day is March 1, 2013. Families who registered online and provided an email address will be sent an email after 4pm on Friday, March 1. Letters will be sent to all families by first-class post to arrive March 2.

NEWS IN BRIEF

➔ MP slams Serb racists

SPORTS minister Hugh Robertson has written to Uefa demanding action following the scenes at the end of England's U21 game in Serbia. Fans hurled racist abuse at England's players, and there was a mass brawl on the pitch. Mr Robertson, the Faversham and Mid Kent MP, said: "The scenes at the end of the game last night were disgraceful. I have written to Uefa president Michel Platini, in support of the FA, urging them to investigate immediately."

➔ Bargain Margate fares

SOUTHEASTERN has unveiled bargain tickets to lure visitors from London into Margate to back up shopping guru Mary Portas who is attempting to inject new life into the town centre. Southeastern will offer £10 tickets via its website whisking travellers from London to Margate during the winter. The normal cost is more than £30. The deal runs from November until February. To kick the promotion off, there are 500 free tickets up for grabs this weekend.

➔ Freedom for archbishop

THE Archbishop of Canterbury Dr Rowan Williams is to be given the Freedom of the City of Canterbury next month. Dr Williams will be given the award in recognition of his work in the district and his contribution to charities and the local community. He will receive the accolade during a council meeting at the Guildhall on November 17. Dr Williams will step down as Archbishop in December after 10 years in office.

BUSINESS

New man at the helm of Archant KOS Media

THE company behind Kent on Sunday and Kent Life magazine has a new publisher.

Simon Irwin (pictured) will lead the Archant KOS Media team in Kent.

Simon was Group Editor of Archant Life's county magazine titles in the South East before he started his new role on Wednesday.

He has a long association with Kent. He is a former editor of the Kent Messenger and was a director of the KM Group.

He said: "This is a challenging and exciting time for all media businesses. I am really looking forward to meeting our readers and customers."

"I have an excellent team here and I feel that we are ideally placed to offer the most compelling and useful all-Kent content to our readers and the best and most cost-effective service to our advertisers."

Archant Lifestyle Regional managing director Tim Thurston said: "Simon's brief is to grow both Kent on Sunday and Kent Life to even greater heights. We feel the combination of the county's two premier brands will be a powerful tool for our existing and new customers."

CRIME

Chip shop owner must pay up or eat porridge

A FISH and chip shop owner who was caught dodging tax has been given two weeks to pay £200,000 back to the revenue – or spend three years behind bars.

Russell Fox, 46, of Maidstone, was caught out by HM Revenue and Customs investigators who found he had been lying about the income of his business, the Little Fish Shop in Sandgate, for six years. They discovered he had routinely provided his accountant with rewritten weekly takings sheets that were lower than those provided by his manager.

Till rolls were also missing, and cash deducted from the true takings spreadsheets ranged from £365 to £5,250 per week. Investigators found that between 2005 and 2011, Fox failed to pay income tax of over £91,000 and national insurance contributions of more than £15,000.

He also swindled his VAT returns, resulting in an underpayment of almost £68,500.

Canterbury Crown Court ordered Fox to pay the £200,000 confiscation order after he failed to pay £175,000 in tax and national insurance. HMRC said the order included an amount to reflect the value of the fraud at today's prices.

In addition, he was sentenced to 12 months imprisonment, suspended for two years. He must also complete 250 hours community service and adhere to a three-month curfew.

Ex-Tory donor says Ukip will win seats from Cameron's candidates because voters 'fed up with the EU'

By Marijke Cox

marijke.cox@archant.co.uk

A FORMER staunch Tory who was sensationally expelled from the party after donating money to Ukip has predicted the euro-sceptic party could take more seats in Kent's elections.

Stuart Wheeler, who owns Chilham Castle just outside Canterbury, became treasurer of Ukip in March.

The 77-year-old, who made his fortune in the spread betting industry, still holds the record for donating the largest ever sum to a political party; £5 million to the Conservatives under William Hague for their 2001 election campaign.

But 11 years on and, according to Mr Wheeler, with much less money in his pocket, he is throwing his weight behind Ukip.

His shift of allegiance, he says, is due to his disillusion with David Cameron's policies on Europe.

In 2009, Mr Wheeler – who says Europe is a financial drain on Britain – donated £100,000 to Ukip in protest at the Tories' reluctance to discuss the issue.

The Old Etonian said Ukip – whose leader Nigel Farage MEP lives in Westerham – was “conservative with a small c” and could potentially do well in the next local and general elections in Kent.

This was hinted at in May, when Conservative leader of true blue Tunbridge Wells Borough Council, Bob Attwood, was defeated by Ukip's Piers Wauchope.

“We could be seeing this more,” said Mr Wheeler. “It will ultimately lead to the loss of some Conservative seats. We do generally take more votes from the Conservatives than from Labour or the Lib Dems.

“People are so fed up with the EU, that is the main reason they may vote Ukip, but we also stand for lower taxes, grammar schools, restoring government democracy. We stand for being tougher on crime – it's not just about Europe.

“We stand for many things the Conservative Party do, but not everything, such as forcing churches to carry out gay marriages.”

Mr Wheeler believes Ukip have an “excellent chance” of winning the European election in 2014. The party came second in the last polls.

He also thinks it is possible the party could also do well in the Police and Crime Commissioner election on November 15, where Cllr Wauchope is its candidate.

“To put things into context: in the local government elections (in May), on average each Ukip candidate had a percentage vote share of 13.8 per cent,” he said.

“If we can do 13.8 per cent in a domestic election, I expect we can do even better in the EU election. If we can improve on that to see 20 per cent we might even win seats in Westminster.”

In the 2010 general election, the Tories rejected an electoral deal in which Ukip candidates would not have stood, in return for a referendum on Britain leaving Europe.

“He (David Cameron) would have had an overall majority if he'd gone with it,” said Mr Wheeler.

“Whether we make another similar offer I don't know. Nigel Farage said at the Ukip conference he had not approached any other party.

“I don't think David Cameron is a terribly honest politician. What I'm nervous of is he might put forward a new referendum deal and rather than asking people: ‘Do you want to stay in Europe’ he'll make it more complicated.

“So he might break the question into three parts: Stay, come out, renegotiate. We just want the question: Do you want to stay in Europe?”

Mr Wheeler said it was crucial Ukip got more funds to help with its campaign.

“We're getting more interest, but we've got to keep it going.”

City's photographers capture a year in the life for 365 exhibition

By Chris Murphy

editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

A YEAR in the life of Canterbury has been captured in a novel exhibition of 365 shots of the historic city – taken one day at a time.

Anyone with a camera was eligible to join in, with the organisers eventually flooded with 1,502 different shots from 127 photographers. In the end the work of 72 snappers was used.

They were looking for just about any shot that captured what the city is all about – from the off-beat to more classic images.

The only proviso was the finished collection for the exhibition would represent one day in Canterbury.

One of the organisers was Nathalie Banaigs, project manager at Kent Creative Arts CIC, in Faversham.

She said: "We were astonished at the collection, it was absolutely marvellous. It is a chance to peep into the life of the community on a day-to-day basis."

The exhibition will be held at the Beane Institute until Sunday, November 11 where a book of the photographs is being sold.

Some are also available to buy as prints or canvases, both at the exhibition and later online at Kent Photo Library.

A 2013 calendar including some of the popular scenes will also be on sale.

The 365 Project was launched in Faversham in 2007, to give visitors the chance to see unusual views of the community through the eyes of enthusiastic photographers.

One of them, Jan Pahl, who is also chairman of the Canterbury Society, said: "The project has given me great pleasure and has encouraged me to expand my use of my camera."

"Taking photos for the Year in the Life project has made me look with new eyes at the place where I live and has encouraged me to be more adventurous in my approach to photography."

Another enthusiast, Rebecca Douglas, added: "I was interested in the social aspects of the project, documenting life through the eyes of the people that use the city. I have been out snapping in all sorts of places and this has helped enhance my sense of place in Canterbury."

Castle gives up its nuclear secrets

By Nick Ames

nick.ames@archant.co.uk

UNDERGROUND tunnels which would have been the seat of government for south east England after a nuclear strike on the UK have been opened up for the first time since they were decommissioned in 1987.

Codenamed Dumpy, the labyrinth of passages, shelters, communication centres and offices were constructed deep in the cliffs under Dover Castle.

It was intended to house a small-scale government, headed by a top civil servant or minister – whose identity is still secret – as well as departments for transport, communications and disaster relief, police officers and military staff.

The complex was never intended to be nuclear bomb proof – instead it would have given protection from radiation and contained supplies for 400 people to last four weeks.

Dumpy, possibly named after dumper trucks, a surveying term or a long forgotten acronym – no-one knows – was built in the cliffs under existing tunnels which date from the Napoleonic era and World War Two, and for years its existence was known to just a few historians and government officials.

The opening comes alongside the 50th anniversary of the Cuban Missile Crisis – the closest the Cold War ever came to becoming 'hot'.

The 13-day face off between the USA and the Soviet Union ended with the Soviets removing nuclear missiles from Fidel Castro's Cuba, in return for American concessions over similar weapons in Turkey.

"Just two weeks before this, Exercise Fallex took place at Dumpy," said English Heritage Cold War expert Rowena Willard-Wright. "This had as its premise that two nuclear weapons had hit Kent – at Manston and West Malling.

"So it was an effort to assess the effectiveness of the regional government centres.

"The bunker would have been protected by soldiers with the orders to shoot at any attempt by people looking for food or protection to gain entry. The old castle walls, the moat and ditches, would have provided an ideal defence for the bunker complex."

Peter Lindley joined the Royal Navy aged 18 at Chatham and was sent to Dumpy during Exercise Fallex.

He said, "One time an officer received a communication that there had been a nuclear blast in the Channel. He was panicking – he didn't know if it was for real or not. So he sent me up top to have a look and sure enough nothing was going on."

Ms Willard-Wright said an investigation into the civil defence network shows it would never have worked, "as many people long suspected".

And in an unusual footnote – when the nuclear button was at its closest to being pushed as

REVEALED:

Dumpy was a series of rooms prepared ready for a small-scale government in the event of nuclear war

Soviet ships carrying more missiles were steaming towards Cuba and US President John F Kennedy had his war speech ready, the decision was taken not to man Dumpy.

It was considered to be too provocative a move.

Firebug admits hospital arson and string of burglary charges

By Chrissie Daniels

chrissie.daniels@archant.co.uk

AN arsonist who started fires at two Kent hospitals, forcing wards to be evacuated while he used the drama as a smoke screen to burgle the buildings, has admitted a string of crimes.

Thomas Ashcroft pleaded guilty to a number of counts of arson and burglary, and now awaits sentencing.

The serial fire-starter struck at sites across the UK this year, with his targets including Medway Maritime Hospital in Gillingham, Kent and Canterbury Hospital, and the Hilton Hotel in Sheffield.

Ashcroft, 34, of no fixed abode, pleaded guilty at Canterbury Crown Court to six charges involving arson, burglary and attempted burglary, and also asked for eight other offences to be taken into consideration – including one in Ramsgate.

Det Insp Lee Whitehead said: "Ashcroft's offending was widespread, spanning several counties. His motivation for fire setting appears to have been to cause sufficient distraction to commit burglaries.

"His actions led to several hospitals being evacuated, putting vulnerable patients at risk. Thankfully no-one was injured in these incidents."

The charges are: Arson with intent to endanger life, and burglary, at Kent and Canterbury Hospital on August 30; arson with intent to endanger life, and burglary, in relation at the Hilton Hotel in Sheffield on July 15; and arson with intent to endanger life, and attempted burglary, at Medway Maritime Hospital on August 29.

The eight other offences relate to a mix of arson and burglary charges across the country.

They took place at Rotherham District General Hospital on July 14; Manchester Midland Hotel on July 21; The Royal Albion Hotel and Sea Life Centre, both in Brighton, on August 26; The Dome Theatre, Brighton and The Hilton Hotel, South Terminal Gatwick Airport on August 27; Crawley Hospital on August 28; and The Cafe, Boating Pool, Ramsgate promenade on August 31.

Ashcroft will be sentenced on December 7.

Estuary airport pollution 'would kill fewer people'

By Marijke Cox

marijke.cox@archant.co.uk

TOWN hall chiefs fighting plans for a Thames estuary airport have slammed a new report which claims there would be fewer deaths caused by pollution if a hub was built in north Kent instead of expansion at Heathrow.

The study by the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and Cambridge University suggested the number of early deaths caused by pollution would rise significantly if a third runway was built at the London airport.

The authors claimed, however, that fewer people would be affected by pollution if an airport was instead built in the Thames estuary.

Medway Council called the findings "insulting and thoughtless".

Lead author Steve Barrett, from MIT, said 110 people in the UK die early each year due to airport emissions, with Heathrow causing around 50 fatalities. He said that could rise to 150 by 2030 if a third runway was built. He stressed that early deaths would be reduced by more than 60 per cent if an estuary airport was built instead.

"In other words, airport capacity would be expanded and health impacts reduced under the Thames hub scenario," he said. "The hub would be downwind of London, such that much of the pollution would blow into the English Channel."

But Medway Council called the research "lame".

Deputy leader Cllr Alan Jarrett said: "If they had bothered to come to Kent they would have seen how a Thames estuary airport would be next to centres with large populations.

"You would also need to factor in that a new airport would carry twice as many passengers as Heathrow.

"We notice the London Mayor's office have already jumped on this report and used it to claim an estuary airport would bring 'clear environmental benefits'. This is a desperate attempt to use lame research to try to push forward Boris's pipe dream airport scheme."

Protesters battling against the plans said the report had little impact on their campaign.

Joan Darwell, from Friends of the North Kent Marshes, said: "We believe there's no need for expansion anywhere. "There should be better use of existing airports."

Passengers keen to go Dutch, according to Manston survey

By Chrissie Daniels

chrissie.daniels@archant.co.uk

PROPOSALS to turn Manston airport into a "gateway to the world" have been given an overwhelmingly positive response after thousands of people participated in a survey.

Last month it was revealed KLM Royal Dutch Airlines was in talks with Manston owner Infratil about the possibility of daily passenger flights to Schiphol in Amsterdam, one of Europe's busiest airports.

If the deal gets the green light, passengers will be able to fly onwards from Amsterdam to 90 destinations across the world, including Asia, America and Africa.

To get an idea of the level of demand for the service, KLM asked Manston to carry out an online survey of residents, which ended last week.

It was a key stage in the process, as several commercial airlines have pulled out of Manston following poor sales.

But, this week the early findings revealed a massive 9,066 people responded, and it was found that 96 per cent of them would rather fly from the Thanet airport than London.

The full results will be analysed by KLM and are not yet available to the public.

Manston chief executive Charles Buchanan, said: "We have been staggered by the level of response to our survey to determine the level and nature of demand for flights to Schiphol in Amsterdam."

He said the results will help KLM to assess whether it wants to start the service of two outbound and two inbound flights a day.

The plans could see Kent residents no longer having to travel to London for long-haul flights. Flying from Manston to Amsterdam takes 40 minutes.

Regular passenger flights in Thanet, which could start from summer 2013, could also create much-needed jobs and a tourism boost that could bring in thousands of visitors.

KLM's plans also raised the issue of using regional airports, like Manston, to ease the UK's capacity problems.

Thanet District Council's director of community services, Madeline Homer, said: "The council has always recognised that Manston represents an integral part of Thanet's ongoing regeneration, and we welcome the ongoing support the airport receives from the public."

Ms Homer said the council was glad the flights weren't planned to run at night when they could have a "detrimental effect on the local environment".

COMPETITION

Win a Christmas shopping trip courtesy of P&O Ferries

P&O FERRIES, the UK's largest ferry operator, is offering KoS readers the chance to win a cross-Channel shopping trip to stock up on cut-price Christmas gifts and treats.

Two lucky winners will each receive return Dover-to-Calais ferry crossings for a car and passengers for a quick Christmas shopping trip, or a longer festive break.

There are special Christmas markets in Calais, Béthune, Boulogne, Arras and Lille starting from November 21, showcasing the best local specialities and festive goodies.

Cross-Channel bargain hunters can choose from giant hypermarkets and shopping centres, to historic markets and specialist boutiques. Calais itself offers a new shopping complex, Les 4 Boulevards, as well as out-of-town outlets like Cité Europe.

To complete the shopping expedition shoppers can literally fill their boots with savings of up to 30 per cent on beer, wine and spirits and as much as 40 per cent on UK prices for fragrances, skincare and cosmetics in the on-board retail outlets.

After all that shopping you can relax on board in Costa coffee shops, lively bars, family lounges or, for a little extra, the executive Club Lounge.

For more information or to book visit www.POFerries.com.

To be in with a chance of winning one of the free ferry crossings just answer the following question:

How much can you save on board when you buy fragrances, skincare and cosmetics from P&O Ferries?

a) 40 per cent b) 30 per cent c) 20 per cent

To enter text KOS followed by P and O Christmas and your answer then your first name, surname address and postcode to 80058, e.g. KOS P and O Christmas C JOHN SMITH 2 THE STREET, TOWN, DV2 2GT. Texts cost 50p plus your standard network rate.

Winners will be selected from all correct entries. The promoter's decision is final.

Usual terms and conditions apply.

Please note, if you should enter after the closing deadline of October 30, 2012, your entry will not be valid, but you still may be charged. SMS services are provided by Velti DR Ltd, SE1 8ND, telephone 020 7633 5020.

Alternatively enter by post to P&O Christmas Shopping Competition, Archant KOS Media, Apple Barn, Hythe Road, Smeeth, Kent TN25 6SS.

Wood Stoves – Range Cookers – Refrigeration – Fireplaces – Gas Fires – Firewood

2012 had the wettest summer for 100 years but whatever the skies throw at us next a trip to Heat Design is sure to help you keep prepared and - most importantly - warm this winter. With friendly, passionate and independent advice, Heat Design in Canterbury has everything you need to get your family ready for the winter.

As a way of heating your home, the humble wood stove has come on a long way. Modern models are highly efficient, safe and beautifully designed. Clean air technology allows many wood stoves to be used in a smoke control area while reducing their environmental impact. The efficiency of the burn means lower fuel costs and more heating for your money.

From traditional to contemporary styling, Heat Design stock hundreds of different models from leading brands such as Chesney's, Hunter, Euroheat, Barbas, Dovre, Yeoman, Stovax, Rais and Woodwarm. Some larger models can also heat hot water.

If you are considering fireplace options, we have many on display in our showroom, beautifully handcrafted in stone, marble and solid timber, from brands such as Chesney's, Montpellier Marble and Farmington. If you want to restore a period house to its former glory or create an authentic look for a more modern home you can be confident that you will find what you are looking for; from a simple timeless design to blend in with any decor or select a mantelpiece faithfully reproduced and hand finished for a classic period feel to your room. A surround can be used to create a traditional, classic setting with a wood stove, period insert or an open fire.

Another option is gas. Gas fires provide a centre piece for a room. Push button convenience with contemporary gas fires enables them to be turned on and off, up and down at the touch of a remote control, combining ease of use with great modern flame effects and high efficiency levels.

From the traditional cottage to the ultra chic apartment our huge range of gas fires means that there is one to suit any interior. Our expert staff are on hand to guide you to the right choice and help you through buying and installing a new gas fire. Heat Design also stock a range of the latest gas fuel efficient fires from top brands such as Gazco and Bellfires.

A beautiful cast iron range cooker can be a focal point of the kitchen, at the centre of the home. At Heat Design we do everything we can to help you choose the range cooker best suited to you. We stock a selection of range cookers from the best manufacturers including Aga, Rayburn, Steel Cuisine and Big Blue.

The Rayburn allows you to integrate your range cooker into a hot water system and heat your home as well as cook. If you are considering purchasing a Rayburn, they are offering £500 off all their models until October 15th and our in-house Raburn Guild heating engineer can guide you through installation into existing systems.

So be inspired this autumn, and come and view our range... We look forward to working with you soon.

Dalai Lama and Lumley unite to back cookbook

By Chris Murphy

editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

IT'S not every day your first recipe book gets signed by the Dalai Lama and backed by TV star Joanna Lumley, but this chef climbed mountains to get the right endorsements for his tome on Nepalese cuisine.

The Ultimate Nepalese Cook Book was written by former Gurkha soldier Pemba Lama. And to show off his dishes, a tasting evening has been organised for next month, showcasing some of the finest meals the nation has to offer. It is being held at Woods Restaurant, The Pantiles, Tunbridge Wells, on Friday, November 16 from 7.30pm.

TASTY: Spicy recipes

Author and Nepalese chef, Pemba said he is preparing a £30 Nepalese buffet with every guest receiving a free signed copy of the new £15 recipe book.

Kent's own Nicci Gurr, of Home Gurr'own, provided the puddings for the book and will create tasty Nepalese desserts with a British twist.

It is all in aid of the Gurkha Welfare Trust, with the publishers making a donation to the trust for every cookbook presented to diners. Kent has strong links to the Gurkhas, with the Nepalese troops based in Folkestone and Maidstone.

The book was very nearly never published at all. An extraordinary twist of events was driven by Cranbrook-based Annie Watsham.

The writer and ardent supporter of the Gurkhas was the widely reported 'mystery woman' who suggested in 2008 that the award-winning actress Joanna Lumley, whose father served with the Gurkhas, should become involved in the Gurkha Justice Campaign.

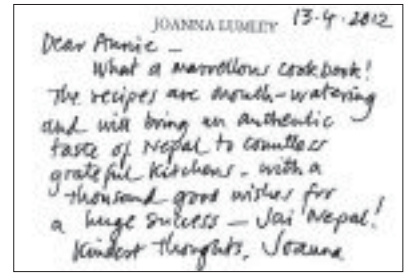

Ms Watsham then set up an online community in 2009 – www.gurkhabusinesscommunity.com – and came to hear from ex-Gurkha chef Pemba Lama who, clutching a pile of recipes he had collected and developed during his career, suggested the idea of bringing them together into The Ultimate Nepalese Cook Book.

Ms Watsham said: "When I heard about Pemba's amazing story, and saw his obvious talent and experience of cooking around the world for a quarter of a century as a civilian and for the Army, I instinctively felt that this was a culinary story that needed to be told and The Ultimate Nepalese Cook Book is the result of that three-year journey."

Nepalese cuisine is a fusion of Chinese, Tibetan and Indian cooking that has resulted in a unique Himalayan cuisine.

Pemba served in the British Army for 23 years as a senior Gurkha catering officer, and has cooked for the Dalai Lama, the Queen and celebrity chef Jamie Oliver. More recently he and his daughter Kessang cooked alongside Madhur Jaffrey, for a television programme featuring Nepalese cuisine due to be aired this winter.

HOLY HELP: The Dalai Lama signs a copy of chef Pemba Lama's cookbook, which is also supported by actress Joanna Lumley. A dinner featuring its recipes will raise cash for the Gurkha Welfare Trust

DISABILITY

Jazz band tunes musicians into talents of the disabled

By Chris Murphy

editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

A JAZZ super-group formed two years ago by Kent musicians to give disabled people the chance to make their own music is now booming.

Band Without Boundaries was launched by Kent Music to attract those who wouldn't ordinarily be interested in playing because of their disabilities. Sue Marlow, Kent Music's development worker for west Kent, said: "I was running a jazz group for adults and asked some of them if they would like to be part of it."

"They are such giving people and so we have a wonderful core of musicians who are learning from the experience, too."

"We had our first session in November, 2010, and we have had about 20 sessions so far, one a month on average, with funding from Kent County Council and a private sponsor channelled through Community Futures Kent. Now we're looking for more funding to keep Band Without Boundaries going into the future."

Interest has soared this year, with more people becoming aware of what Kent Music is doing, but they want still more jazz fans to get in touch. And they don't even need musical skills to get going.

The band practises for free at Amherst Primary School, Sevenoaks. Each session is attended by about 20 people, mainly from Sevenoaks, Tonbridge and Swanley, and includes a mix of musicians and eight to 10 disabled people and their support workers.

The sessions are directed by Joe Browne, a former member of Kent Youth Jazz Orchestra and the National Youth Jazz

Orchestra, who is now a free-lance musician and music leader. Instruments available to play include keyboards, wind, guitars, and percussion including tambourines, shakers, claves, djembes and even a full drum kit.

Ms Marlow said: "A lot of what we play is improvised but we also do some well-known material – our version of the James Bond theme has become a bit of a regular."

Mr Browne said: "Leading the jazz club has been one of the happiest musical experiences of my life, the infectious atmosphere of joy that fills the room during workshops reminds me of why I became a musician in the first place."

Overwhelmed cats charity forced to turn away animals

By Chris Murphy

editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

AN animal charity has been swamped with so many unwanted cats it has been forced to close its doors to any more moggies in need of a new home.

Cats Protection branches across Kent have now closed their waiting lists to take more felines in – just as Christmas approaches, typically the busiest time of year.

New figures show the organisation homed 1,042 cats in 2010, and 969 last year.

There are currently 152 cats in Kent branches waiting for suitable homes to be found.

To combat the flood of unwanted cats being offered, the group said people should think twice about taking on an animal in the first place.

Now Cats Protection's Kent branches have issued an emergency appeal for new owners to come forward to combat the dramatic rise in the number of homeless cats needing the charity's help.

Christine Harvey, regional development manager for the South East,

HERE KITTY: Tigger needs a new owner said: "This surge in homeless cats is extremely distressing. It is a crisis for the cats and it piles additional pressure onto our volunteers.

"The branches are already stretched to the limit looking after the cats in their care.

"I fear this could push them to breaking point if it continues and leave us unable to help many more unwanted cats out there so we are urgently asking for help."

It said the public can also help by having their present pets neutered to reduce the amount of stray and unwanted cats.

The group can even provide financial assistance for this to people on some benefits.

The Cats Protection charity, which was founded in 1927, annually helps more than 235,000 cats.

There are branches across the county in Bexley and Dartford; Bromley; Canterbury; Sidcup; Folkestone and Hythe; Maidstone; Sittingbourne; Swale; Tenterden; and Tunbridge Wells.

Anyone wishing to adopt a cat, make a donation, or who requires help with neutering costs, can find their local branch at www.cats.org.uk or contact the helpline on 03000 121212.

CATS IN NEED: Unwanted animals including Tinkerbell, bottom right, and a whole host of kittens are desperate for homes as Cats Protection staff struggle to cope

New housing scheme reveals ancient secrets

By Chris Murphy

editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

ONE of Kent's oldest settlements is about to become one of the county's newest.

But archaeologists are determined to glean as much information and knowledge about Cheeseman's Green before it is turned into a housing estate.

Duncan Hawkins from consultant CgMs and he says it is of vital importance more work is done before the diggers move in.

He said there is a fascinating picture emerging about the way Ashford's agricultural landscape looked from the late Bronze Age through to the early years of Roman occupation.

Already, interesting and unusual finds have been unearthed in the excavations at Cheeseman's Green.

This is a site given planning permission by Ashford Borough Council for up to 1,180 new homes, and the first phase has already started, giving the 'time team' a new impetus.

Thankfully, the developer, Crest Strategic Projects, is known for its supportive and positive approach to archaeology, and it commissioned the large-scale archaeological investigations at Cheeseman's Green.

CgMs is working with Kent County Council heritage experts and Wessex Archaeology to unearth the past.

It has already revealed human activity on the site stretching back 12,000 years, including the flint tools of ancient hunter gatherer communities, and Neolithic, Bronze Age and Iron Age activity sites, settlements and farmsteads.

CIRCLE TIME: Evidence of an Iron Age monument has been found

Mr Hawkins said: "The earliest human activity represented on the site was evidence for Mesolithic hunter gatherers. A large number of flint tools, including knives and axes, were recovered.

"Subsequently the site was settled by Neolithic farmers and there appears to have been a long continuity of agricultural settlement and land division extending from the Neolithic, through the Bronze and Iron ages until the early Roman period.

"The importance of the site is that its scale has allowed the examination of a significant area, and taken in conjunction with previous investigations at Park Farm, Waterbrook Park and the Orbital Park, has allowed archaeologists to determine that settlement density in what is now south Ashford in the late Iron Age and early Roman period was similar to that evidenced in the late post-medieval period in the 17th and 18th century, with a similar density of farms and settlements.

"The new Roman fields were laid out on a grid relating to a new road system, one of which flanks the southern boundary of the site.

"Subsequently, the Roman field systems were abandoned, probably due to climate change in the late Roman period, and the subsequent medieval and post-medieval settlement pattern up to the early 19th century was strikingly similar to that represented in the late pre-historic periods."

Cllr Gerry Clarkson, deputy leader of Ashford council, said: "These important archaeological investigations provide us with a link to Ashford's past that will be of interest not only to the community but have a broader, regional importance.

"It is fascinating to learn about the discoveries and I hope these will be of real interest to everyone interested in the history of the borough as well as adding to the national store of knowledge."

Mr Hawkins said the entire development site will eventually be examined and the findings published.

Skills base is under threat

While he welcomes the prospect of tens of thousands of new jobs, Roger Vickerman warns they are not the solution to our problems

THE announcement of the possible development of a leisure theme park in north Kent that will create – it is claimed – up to 27,000 jobs is a major boost to the local economy.

The Kent economy, and particularly that of west and north Kent, has generally been highly dependent on the London economy for growth, although it has tended to lag behind the more dynamic aspects.

Thus the implementation of a major new job generator designed to bring in visitors from across north-west Europe not only creates jobs but makes the areas less dependent on the fortunes of the neighbouring metropolises.

To the extent that the new development on the Swanscombe peninsula can be linked with Ebbsfleet International station it could have knock-on effects which will benefit other businesses in Kent by generating new rail traffic, particularly for Eurostar, which would enable it to improve the frequency of services which stop in Kent.

In addition, this could be the catalyst for the development of a new Thames crossing to relieve the Dartford Crossing. And it is all on a brownfield site, aiding regeneration of redundant industrial land. So this is all a welcome and positive development.

But before we get too carried away, we have to also be aware of some of the less positive aspects.

The Kent economy has seen a significant loss of jobs in manufacturing industry in recent years and Kent has one of the lowest densities of jobs in the high technology sectors in the greater South East.

These are the jobs which generate the value-added and the self-sustaining growth which the local economy needs if it is to be less dependent on the fortunes of other regions.

Kent has lost significant numbers of these jobs, the most recent being due to the closure of the Pfizer research facility in Sandwich.

While successful attempts are being made to replace some of the jobs it will be difficult to generate similar jobs in sufficient numbers, and the workers in such jobs are typically highly mobile so their spending power and the skills base will often move away with them.

And that introduces another problem area in the Kent labour market: the lack of a skills base to compete with other neighbouring regions to attract the right sort of new investment and jobs.

While there will be skilled jobs in the new park, they will be a small proportion of the total job creation, many are likely to be less skilled and relatively low-wage jobs.

We cannot object to job crea-

If skill acquisition is not necessary to find a job then there is less incentive to learn

tion when there are many unemployed, and the jobs are likely to appeal to the young unemployed who are a particular concern, but then it becomes an unfortunate circle.

If skill acquisition is not necessary to find a job then there is less incentive to acquire such skills and the skills base remains low, possibly too low to attract high quality, high value added jobs.

The lesson here is not to object to the new park, it will bring much-needed jobs into the country and direct expenditure by visitors, but to recognise that it is not a solution in itself. It will require continuing efforts to develop the appropriate skills to attract this high value activity into Kent which is what is really needed to transform the local economy.

KOS COMMENT

Don't forget the strain felt by our youngsters

JUST as parents recover from the stress of the Kent and Medway Test results, the pressure is back on to make sure they secure a grammar place for their child.

And with hundreds set to miss out, there could be a traumatic time for some next March when school placements are announced.

For although many of those who miss out on a selective place will be from out of county, there will be some Kent children whose dreams of going to their local grammar school are crushed, as a mixture of over-subscription and super-selectives dampen their chances.

What we must remember is these are 11-year-olds and whether for or against the grammar school system, the strain it puts on these youngsters is undeniable.

Equality idea is damaging

AT a meeting in Birmingham Town Hall, on Monday, October 8, the Coalition for Marriage was finally able to present the well-supported view that the proposal from government for Civil Marriage Equality is damaging rather than healing our society and community.

For many this illustrates the yawning chasm between the "trendy" metropolitan worlds of Mr Cameron, Mr Clegg, and Mr Miliband, and the traditional values of many of their voters.

A recent survey of Tory constituency chairmen found that 71 per cent think the proposal – which the Prime Minister has pledged will be law by 2015 – should be abandoned.

Nearly half claim their local parties have lost members as a result of the plans.

Just 11 per cent say same-sex marriage should be a political priority right now, at a time when Whitehall spending is facing deep cuts and ministers are driving forward key reforms in education, health and welfare.

This view seems very well reflected locally, where quiet but clear support is being shown to those of us willing to defend the institution of marriage, unless and until it is properly safeguarded through this proposed change.

Airport will be a jobs boost

PLEASE can we have a pro-estuary airport voice – doesn't anybody who is unemployed around here want a job?

We need things like the airport, the theme park, etc, to get the economy around here going, don't we?

Lin Martin,
Medway

Boris is just point scoring

I think an estuary airport is most definitely surplus to requirements.

The 'urgent review' of airport capacity is more about London Mayor Boris scoring points with his voters. Fortunately, he has jurisdiction neither in Kent nor Parliament but is charismatic and persuasive. God forbid he should successfully challenge David Cameron as Tory Leader – he wouldn't be able to resist making this airport reality.

The funding is foreign so no worries there – though infrastructure upgrades would cost the taxpayer to the tune of £30 billion.

Isn't it about time we had a louder voice as to how our hard-earned taxes are spent?

Speak up, or see this sleeping giant move closer to reality.

The review should involve an appraisal of how the UK could better use its regional airports. How about diverting all internal and tourist flights to regional airports?

Connect Gatwick and Heathrow – expand them if necessary – so that Heathrow/Gatwick remains the international competitive hub for commercial and business flights. Without being nimby-ist I think we should continue developing what is already there.

While they're at it, develop Kent's Manston airport and surely there would be enough airports to satisfy national demand? Not forgetting, of course, flying is probably destined to become the pastime of richer folk and businessmen and women given the upward-spiralling of fuel prices.

Experience is key for PCC

REGARDING the 'party political' comments made to your reporter by the new Conservative justice secretary Chris Grayling, when he said that he does not think a Tory Police and Crime Commissioner would follow the party line.

Who does he think he's kidding when his party is responsible for hundreds of trained and experienced police officers in Kent being made redundant?

This government has deemed that this election is necessary. Therefore, is it not best that we consider the qualifications of each candidate with great care?

Ukip's Cllr Wauchope, 55, is a criminal barrister with 27 years' experience.

He has worked in fighting crime with police officers from more than 12 different forces – therefore, I consider him to be the best qualified candidate named so far.

Yes, he is from Ukip and I have studied their policies and consider them to be of sound, practical common sense. I will be voting for him.

Give us back our tax cash

PRESSURE is growing on the UK Coalition government for action to make the banks pay for the mess they have created. Again, we see, from the Conservative conference, the misinformation applied to our current financial situation.

It is not entirely the Labour Party's problem that we find ourselves in the current financial mess – this is a total lie perpetuated by the Tory Party. In actual fact, we had very right-wing governments throughout the world in power in many western countries during the 'credit-crunch' – 2008 and the build-up to, so I really think the Coalition should stop misinforming us about this.

Particularly in France, and in the US we in fact had very right-wing governments in control, and still the same situations exist in these countries, to a larger or lesser extent.

Again, I say to you, we have had a situation where the banks have been bailed-out to several trillion pounds with our (taxpayers') money, and it is now far beyond the point at which these banks now have to start paying back the UK taxpayer for these bail-outs with very real, and realistic returns to the public purse. This is now far overdue with regard to the payback, and anything less is unacceptable.

So, I ask you yet again, when is the taxpayer going to get their £2.5 trillion back? And it really is no good saying that this was entirely down to the last Labour government, as I didn't hear a single word from David Cameron in official opposition, as to any alternative to the bank bail-out.

It is absolutely clear, in my mind that the Tory Party neither opposed the bank bail-out, or indeed opposed the total deregulation of the banking system prior to the credit crunch in 2008.

Will power solution to previous relationship

Q IN 1986 I married a woman who had a daughter by a previous relationship, and I adopted her. We had no children, and in 1991 we divorced.

I have not seen my ex-wife or her daughter for about 20 years. I remarried in 1999, and now have two children. My question is, could the adopted daughter have any claim against my estate on my death? Would making a will make any difference?

At present, I have no will as I am happy for everything to go to my wife and two children.

A YOU should make a will. If you die intestate, then all your children have the right to share in your estate, and that includes any adopted child.

Making a will that excludes the adopted daughter strengthens your case, but it is not a complete guarantee. She could claim against your estate, saying that leaving her out of your will is likely to cause hardship.

Unless there is something you have not mentioned, I think it is likely a court would reject any such claim.

Your adopted daughter is now an adult. You have not said that you have paid maintenance for her, so I assume you did not or that it ended years ago.

But see a solicitor to make sure your will is perfectly clear, and that only your two recent children are beneficiaries.

Q CAN you tell me what happened to the phone company O2? Are shares still worth anything?

A THE Spanish company Telefonica made a takeover bid for O2 several years ago. If you have O2 shares, you are owed £2 for each share. The money is sitting in the bank, waiting for you to claim it. Call Lloyds TSB on 0870 850 6907.

Q CAN I sue the directors of a limited company that has ceased trading, owing me a refund for faulty goods? The sum involved is £450.

A EXCEPT in unusual circumstances, generally involving some sort of corruption or deceit, directors cannot be sued for the debts of their company. This is what the word 'limited' means. The liability of the people behind the company is limited to the amount they agreed to invest in the first place, which is typically just £1.

Q I AM 63 and have worked for myself for 30 years or more. I have saved about £150,000 in a private pension plan for my retirement.

If I draw this at 65, what sort of pension would I get? I am single with no dependants.

TONY HETHERINGTON
MONEY CLINIC

A ANNUITY rates change regularly, but based on current figures Aviva would pay you a level pension – with no increases – of about £8,900 a year. It could be more if you have health problems or are a smoker. For the best deal, see a local broker as you approach 65.

Q I WAS contacted by Advanced Global Trading, about investing in carbon credits. I like the idea of investing in something ethical, but I have been told to expect profits of 20pc upwards, which sounds a bit too high to be safe.

A BE VERY careful. Advanced Global Trading Ltd was dissolved last February, according to Companies House. If it is still trading, then it shouldn't be, so perhaps someone has hijacked the name. AGT did sell carbon credits as an investment – but again, be careful.

The police and the watchdog Financial Services Authority have issued warnings. This is a new investment area and there are no rules to protect you. Brokers need no licence and there is no proper market for credits so you could find it impossible to turn them back into cash. If you like ethical investments, consider First State Asia Pacific Sustainability Fund (020 7332 6500). This has shown 81pc growth over the past five years. Or try the Royal London Ethical Bond (020 7506 6500), which has shown 9pc growth in the past year.

Q I HAVE received just over £2,000 from the will of a relative. Will this affect my working tax credits, and do I have to declare it?

A WORKING tax credits are based on your income, and an inheritance does not count as income. You do not need to declare the £2,000 itself, but if you invest it, then any income it yields could affect your future credit claims.

Growing stronger after nightmare of '87 crash

It was a grim day for the market, but Black Monday also taught us some vital lessons. ADAM AIKEN reports

THIS week marks the 25th anniversary of Black Monday – the huge crash that wiped tens of billions of pounds off global stock markets.

A quarter of a century on, many traders and investors still remember the sheer terror that gripped the market on October 19, 1987, as shares plummeted and people scrambled to sell their holdings before they lost even more of their value.

We have become all-too-well accustomed to stock market wobbles over the past few years – the crisis of 2008 was particularly pronounced – but Black Monday will remain a nightmare for many people for years to come.

By the end of October, 1987, the stock market in the UK had fallen by 26pc and the US's by 23pc.

These falls were beaten elsewhere, however, and New Zealand was hit particularly badly, with its stock market down by about 60pc from its 1987 peak.

So-called 'program trading' was widely blamed for the events of 1987.

This involves computers reacting to market movements by automatically selling or buying – but the outcome of computers taking this kind of action can result in a snowball effect that just makes matters worse.

As computers reacted to the falls in share prices, they triggered sell-offs that led to the market falling further and faster, and it all became something of a self-fulfilling prophecy.

But while the crash itself caused panic, and there were undoubtedly people who lost a lot of money on that fateful day, there are a number of lessons that can be learnt – and some of them highlight how a stock market crash can be as much an opportunity as it can be a disaster.

KEEP CALM AND CARRY ON

The FTSE 100 ended 1987 higher than it started, and within two years it had surpassed its pre-crash peak.

People who panicked at the time had probably already missed the best moment to sell, and by leaving the market they were preventing themselves from benefiting from the subsequent recovery.

LOOK AT THE WHOLE PICTURE

Tom Stevenson, investment director at Fidelity Worldwide Investment, said: "Look through the market gyrations to what is happening in the real world.

"The 1987 crash was triggered by over-exuberance (the market had risen by nearly 40pc in the first nine months of 1987) and was then compounded by automated computer trading. The underlying economy was sound at the time – hence the quick recovery."

TAKE A LONG-TERM VIEW

"The 1987 crash looks insignificant on a long-term chart today even though, at the time, it might have felt like the end of the world," Mr Stevenson said.

DON'T TRY TO TIME THE MARKET

When your emotions are running high, you risk making the wrong investment decisions because we are inherently geared to run from danger. However, the best investors do the reverse and walk towards danger – "albeit with their eyes wide open", said Mr Stevenson.

BE PREPARED FOR THE WORST

It is important to diversify rather than putting all your eggs in one basket. This will mitigate your losses should one particular company, sector or region suffer more than others.

INVEST REGULARLY, A LITTLE AT A TIME

Mr Stevenson said: "This way, you will take advantage of market falls such as the 1987 crash, picking up a few shares or units in a fund when they are cheap – even though your mind is telling you to put your money under the mattress."

KEEP SOME OF YOUR POWDER DRY

Although 1987 was an extreme example, crashes do happen and are part of the ebbs and flows of the stock market.

When they do happen, you want to have some ammunition ready to take advantage.

"It may be frustrating to have even a small proportion of your savings earning next to nothing in cash when shares are rising, but so too is being unable to capitalise on bargain-basement prices when periodically they appear," said Mr Stevenson.

BUY LOW AND SELL HIGH

The stock market is the only market in the world in which people are often tempted to buy when prices are high and can be put off by low prices.

But Mr Stevenson said: "Think about how you would buy fruit and veg at a street market. You would behave in exactly the opposite way."

COSTS CAN BE IMPORTANT – BUT VALUE IS MORE SO

You might be tempted to plump automatically for an investment fund with the lowest charges.

This might turn out to be a good move – but equally, paying a little more for the best investment manager could result in much better returns. The actions of a decent fund manager could more than compensate you for the higher charges.

Commercial sector greets opportunity presented by first business roadshow

By Nick Ames

nick.ames@archant.co.uk

THE Business Growth Show made its mid-Kent debut at The Orchards Conference Centre in East Malling, attracting companies from across the commercial sector.

There are now more than 40 such events each year around the UK and each is a business-to-business roadshow that offers decision-makers the opportunity to grow their business by networking with forward-thinking, dynamic delegates.

Being non-industry-specific, companies from all backgrounds find new, inventive ways to help their business grow, discover new suppliers, reduce costs and gain industry knowledge from expert exhibitors.

The show featured topics such as the works of economic guru QJ The Inspirationist – 'How to turn your creativity into cash' – and growth adviser Ian George's work '18 secrets super-successful business owners know and do, that most business owners either don't know or don't do'.

There were also speed-networking sessions, business stands, 20 expert exhibitors and some 100 delegates.

Local and national businesses attended, including Barclaycard Merchant Systems, The Intellectual Property Office and Creditsafe.

Event director Ian James said: "We were delighted with our very first Maidstone show. The Business Growth Shows are unique in being intimate business networking roadshows, not major foot-slogging exhibitions.

"Our longest-established shows around the UK regularly achieve around our maximum of 40 exhibitors and 250 delegates, so this was an extremely good start for us."

Delegate Philippa Monger, from

Liquid Computing, said she "really enjoyed the show and met some very useful contacts", while Rick Fuggle, from Aegle, said he "enjoyed the show and the networking very much".

Each event held under the Business Growth Show banner supports a regional charity, with the Maidstone show helping The Kent Foundation For Young Entrepreneurs, which had a free exhibition stand to attract mentors to enable young people to achieve for themselves.

"We were delighted to support the foundation to help the young people from Kent start and grow a business," said James.

The next show for the mid-Kent region will be on Tuesday, November 27, in Tunbridge Wells.

Phone Ian James for details on 020 8300 7584, email ian@thebusinessgrowthshow.co.uk or see www.thebusinessgrowthshow.co.uk.

REDEVELOPMENT

Council's go-ahead for £10m development could herald brighter future for Orpington

PLANS for a £10 million retail and leisure development in Orpington that could create up to 130 jobs have been approved by Bromley Council.

The decision gives the green light to development of The Walnuts shopping centre to include a seven-screen cinema, retail and restaurant units and a new and improved public square.

The 950-seat cinema will be the first in Orpington in 30 years as part of the investment project.

Peter Dean, chairman of the development control committee, which gave the go-ahead, said: "This is a high-quality scheme which will provide much-improved leisure facilities in the heart of Orpington town centre.

"The scheme will enhance the public amenities in the area and provide a good mix of retail and leisure. The committee unanimously agreed it will greatly benefit Orpington."

The Miller Developments scheme includes plans to relocate the existing market to the adjacent College Square, plant two mature walnut trees and create a glazed frontage for the cinema lobby to provide visual interest.

It is intended to complete the project by the end of 2013.

Peter Morgan, executive councillor for renewal and recreation, said: "This landmark development shows a positive step forward for Orpington town centre and expands on our vision to 'Build A Better Bromley'.

"The scheme will not only bring 130 new jobs to the area but will also increase vital footfall, ensuring the vitality of the area and benefiting existing businesses and residents."

The scheme is in line with the council's plan to raise Orpington's profile and improve facilities. This has included the £2.2m high-street improvements, with vacancy levels in shops improving by 3 per cent.

RETAIL

Economic boost for cathedral city as report shows rise in new companies

CANTERBURY district has seen a record-breaking number of new company registrations in the first half of the year, according to the quarterly Duport Business Confidence Report for the area, with 265 new companies starting trading.

The study uses public records and data from Companies House to record the number of new businesses starting out and those closing down. During the first six months of 2012, there was an increase of 2.3 per cent in the number of company formations in the city.

There was more good news for the local economy with a further drop in company closures. These reached an all-time high of 257 in the first half of 2009, when the worse effects of the recession were being felt.

Numbers have been dropping steadily since then, with only 139 company closures in the first half of this year.

Canterbury district retains some 4,700 businesses, with up to 60,000 full- and part-time employees.

Unemployment in the city has dropped significantly since 2001, due to the opening of the Whitefriars shopping complex, which created thousands of job opportunities. The city also benefits from a healthy tourist trade, with more than a million visitors every year.

Peter Valaitis, managing director of Duport.co.uk, said: "Canterbury is a thriving place which, although not completely unscathed by the recession, is doing well despite tough economic conditions. The record number of company formations set up in the first half of this year points towards an economy that looks set to continue growing in years to come."

He added that the unique nature of Canterbury's tourist offering, together with a healthy economy and low unemployment, should provide a solid economic base for the future.

Young chef hopes online scheme is the recipe for a thriving career

By Nick Ames

nick.ames@archant.co.uk

WITH youth unemployment a cause for national concern, and ways to harness and develop young people's enthusiasm and potential always a matter for discussion, one Kent business has benefited from a new Government scheme.

The Secret Garden restaurant at Mersham-le-Hatch has taken on two apprentices to work in its kitchen after they applied for vacancies online.

A website allows those looking to gain an apprenticeship to register on the internet and create a home page detailing areas of interest and their own qualifications.

Young people can also search for opportunities with companies that have themselves registered at www.apprenticeships.org.uk, and would-be applicants can browse the online information looking for appropriate choices.

The Government set up the programme in a bid to put young people in touch with companies and vice versa in a bid to create job opportunities.

Jack Crust, 17, from Ashford, is training to be a chef under the scheme. He said: "I thought I'd done as much as I could at school, so I looked at the site and the opportunities for a career in catering that were out there.

"I've always been interested in catering and thought I'd give it a go. I learnt some things at school, which helped, but now watching and learning in the workplace has given me a whole lot more skills."

At The Secret Garden the apprentices work alongside chefs in general kitchen duties, but they are also entrusted with creating recipes from the basic ingredients.

"It's challenging, but the help and advice is there when I need it," said Jack.

Stephanie Wanstall, owner of the business, said: "It is about training the next generation of chefs," she said.

"Practical experience is in my view more valuable than learning on a course, and all our chefs are very keen to help the young people, who in turn bring energy and enthusiasm to the working environment."

FOOD

Thai's the limit as restaurant group focuses on expansion

THE Giggling Squid Thai restaurant group, which has premises in Tunbridge Wells and three Sussex towns, has announced it intends to be the first national chain to specialise in Thai food.

Four more restaurant openings are planned this year – and the target is for 50 more in the next five years.

Sites around the M25 are being looked into, including one in Sevenoaks, as, unlike many other countries whose food is popular in the UK, there is no large-scale business opening venues.

The company's bosses say they want to explore affluent areas in which to open branches of the restaurant – but they also emphasised the food served would all be as genuine as possible and reflect the tastes and flavours of the Far East.

Andy Laurillard owns the chain with his wife Pranee.

He said: "The thing about Thai food is that you can't make it in a factory – you have to make it with chefs on site.

"There are just over 1,500 Thai restaurants across the UK and we've eaten in lots of them and I can't think of anywhere that gets near the peaks of Thai cuisine I've experienced in Thailand."

The restaurants' signature dish is called giggling squid – a steamed baby squid filled with minced chicken with basil and chilli.

Tapas-style dishes are also on offer.

Networking event gets day off to an enterprising start

BUSINESS-OWNERS and executives from across The Weald flocked to Tenterden's biggest business networking breakfast, which was hailed as a great event.

Organised by the Wealden Business Group and held at The Little Silver Country Hotel in Tenterden, the open day was designed to help local businesses meet potential new customers and professional contacts.

More than 75 members and guests attended.

WBG chairman Richard Harvey said: "It was a terrific morning and a real example of what business networking can achieve – helping local business to succeed, and stimulating growth."

Magnificent seven have warm glow from heating company's community initiative

SWALE Heating has taken on seven apprentices as part of a community initiative in partnership with clients AmicusHorizon and East Kent Housing.

The youngsters have embarked on plumbing and administration apprenticeships with Swale Heating at its Sittingbourne headquarters.

Matt Hobbs, client and resident liaison manager at Swale Heating, explained that the apprentices all live in social-housing properties owned by the two associations.

They were chosen after a selection process was agreed with housing association client AmicusHorizon and also East Kent Housing, which was set up by Canterbury, Dover, Shepway and Thanet councils to help improve housing services for tenants.

Hobbs said: "Applicants, who are all residents of AmicusHorizon and East Kent Housing, needed to apply and attend an open day at our offices, for Amicus Horizon tenants, while East Kent Housing arranged an open day in Canterbury.

NEW START: The seven apprentices

"Applicants were given details of the apprenticeships on offer and we outlined the required skills and what we were looking for. They also undertook a brief written test, which was used to progress to the next stage, where the successful candidates were interviewed, given a further written test and scored based upon their answers.

"The apprenticeships are two years initially, qualifying them as plumbers with an NVQ Level 2.

"Those that show the correct aptitude and skills after this will progress to train and ultimately become gas engineers.

"They are paid and employed by us, initially on a two-year contract, and there will be a job for all successful candidates after this.

"Swale Heating celebrates its 40th anniversary this year and I can't think of a better way to help mark this special year than by giving these opportunities to youngsters from the local community."

Training, courses and careers

College playing its part to train new engineers

A REPORT by the Royal Academy of Engineering has warned that there are not enough engineers in the UK to support the economic recovery.

The UK would need a minimum of 100,000 science, technology, engineering and maths (STEM) graduates a year to maintain the status quo.

North West Kent College says it is eager to help young people progress with their education and to ultimately find employment. With a job market scarce of engineering graduates, the college is keen to make the local community aware of the potential job opportunities that could help to reduce unemployment rates.

An Autumn Fast Track programme is offered across the college and for all of the engineering courses, which will begin on November 5.

The fast track programme is designed to help young people who feel they have made the wrong choice about their education, and is giving them the opportunity to change their mind and come to college.

The college says it has an extensive engineering department with courses including electrical and electronic engineering, refrigeration and air conditioning, plumbing and mechanical engineering. The college also offers Higher National Diplomas/Certificates (HND/C) and Higher Apprenticeships in electrical and electronic engineering as well as apprenticeships in most of the engineering disciplines.

Curriculum manager for engineering Scott Wilkins, said: "We offer a great provision that enables students to progress from entry level all the way through to higher education.

"The benefit is that they get hands on experience as well as the theory side, which sets our students up for both further study and the engineering industry."

Legal training leads to full-time jobs at law firm

TUNBRIDGE Wells law firm Cripps Harries Hall LLP, has announced that four newly qualified solicitors have taken up permanent positions at the firm, having completed their two-year training contracts.

In addition, seven new trainees joined the firm last month September, with a view to landing own permanent roles in 2014.

The firm says the programme is evidence of its long-standing commitment to investing in talent and growing legal expertise within the business.

Among the newly-qualified solicitors, James Blyth has taken up a position in commercial dispute resolution, Erin Gilman has joined the corporate team, Sarah Crowell has taken a role focused on planning and dispute resolution, and Hannah Harris has joined the employment team.

The new trainee solicitors include William Bishop, Rachel Garland, Lorna-Jane Gittings, Laura Jones, Will Leney, Dino Sikket and Mireille Turner. All have joined Cripps on a two-year training contract, each sitting with different practice teams on a four-month rotation, allowing them to develop their interests and their potential future legal specialisations.

Cripps' managing partner, Jonathan Denny, said: "It has long been our policy to train bright graduates and retain them on qualification, and we have maintained this programme throughout these challenging times."

Could your businesses take on an apprentice?

KENT businesses are benefiting from the talents of young people by taking on apprentices.

More than 280 apprentice places have been pledged by companies throughout the county and Kent County Council is looking for more businesses that would benefit from funding to help hire an apprentice.

New Look Tiling, in Maidstone had a visit from Kent County Council leader Cllr Paul Carter to meet Anthony Ashton, 19, who has just started an apprenticeship.

Owner Martin Rose said: "I have built up my business to a stage where I could often do with a hand, so the apprentice scheme couldn't have come at a better time for me. I found the whole process straight forward too, a lot can be done online.

"Anthony is a real asset, helping with all the running around and lifting, he's picking up new skills daily, which makes my life easier.

"Everyone has to start somewhere and it's good to give young people a chance.

"Young people are the future and they need to learn their skills from somewhere. He gets a qualification and it also provides me with help. Give a young person a chance, they might surprise you."

Cllr Carter added: "Every business in Kent can benefit from taking on an apprentice. Kent County Council has put aside £2 million to fund the Kent Employment Programme.

"Businesses receive £2,000 for each young person they take on if they have been out of work for three months or more. The team can also help companies access national funding to bring the costs down further.

"These funding opportunities can bring the costs for businesses down to as little as £52 a week. Kent is on target to have created an additional 900 new apprentices by 2014 thanks to companies like New Look Tiling."

Teenage shop assistant Ruby is a first for homeware giant Cath Kidston

HIGH street favourite Cath Kidston has teamed up with Canterbury College to launch its first employee apprenticeship programme.

Ruby Streek, 16, from Faversham, became the retail chain's first apprentice when she began a Level 2 in retail skills qualification at the college.

Ruby, who has been working at Cath Kidston's Canterbury branch since the start of September, will spend one day every three weeks at the college learning about everything from approaching and advising customers, to creating sales-boosting shop displays.

She said: "This is great for me because when I left school I couldn't choose whether to go to college or get a full-time job. Being able to do a few days at college and apply it to the workplace really appealed to me.

"I feel a level of responsibility to live up to knowing I'm Cath Kidston's first apprentice but it's going well and I'm enjoying it."

Ruby has a day of lessons at the college once every three weeks, with a final exam in April. Completion of the course could lead onto a Level 3 in retail skills qualification.

The college's retail skills tutor Sarah Cooper said: "Ruby's got to be able to approach customers and sell to them. For a 16-year-old that can be hard to do, and this will be a real confidence booster for her.

"Everything Ruby learns here she can take to the shop floor where it will become second nature."

Cath Kidston is working with the college's Canterbury Retail Skills Shop which delivers courses specifically designed for those working in the retail sector. These include apprenticeships, customer service retail management courses, and the new Mary Portas Guide to Successful Retailing.

The college's business account executive, Yolanda Levina, said: "When we approached Cath Kidston about working together Ruby had just started as a Saturday girl. The manager was keen to offer her an opportunity to grow within the organisation.

"Canterbury College had just become the only college in the area to be awarded National Skills Academy for Retail status and we were able to enrol her onto the retail apprenticeship programme.

"We are very proud and excited to work with Cath Kidston."

Art college helps pupils learn to enjoy the Big Draw

SCHOOLCHILDREN are being encouraged to pick up a pencil and draw thanks to a special collaboration between the University for the Creative Arts (UCA) and Turner Contemporary.

Students from UCA Maidstone are taking over the Margate gallery's regular weekend workshops during October for the national Big Draw campaign.

The sessions are on Saturdays and Sundays from 1-4pm in the gallery's Learning Studio.

Subject leader in fine art at UCA, Grant Petrey, said: "We are proud to be working with Turner Contemporary as part of the Big Draw campaign because we want encourage youngsters to find new ways of creative thinking and learning, while also expressing themselves and gaining a new understanding of the world around them."

"We hope that a wider message of the importance of community, collaboration and creative fun is spread via Turner Contemporary and UCA students and connect people in a positive way."

Launched as a one-day event in 2000, the Big Draw is now the world's biggest annual celebration of drawing, lasting a full month. Every October, museums, galleries, heritage sites, libraries, schools and parks join in.

The month-long UCA workshops will also benefit the students leading them.

Mr Petrey said: "It is important that our students experience the art world beyond the confines of UCA and are able to make use of the skills they're being given so they can better understand how they are connected to a wider community of practice."

"The workshops give a wide range of students, from different year groups and courses, the opportunity to come together to work constructively with other artists in a gallery environment and also to contextualise what they do for a public audience."

The gallery's learning officer Keiko Higashi, said: "Turner Contemporary is passionate about getting young people interested in art so the Big Draw campaign is an ideal project for us to support."

Rugby victory for young Oliver

A SPECIAL presentation has been held at Maidstone Rugby Club to celebrate the club's new change kit designed by Oliver Ralph, a Year 8 student at Cornwallis Academy in the county town.

Oliver was presented with a shirt and framed copy of his design. The first team wore the new kit in their opening home game of the season and each shirt has been printed with 'Designed by Oliver Ralph' on the back.

Earlier this year Cornwallis Academy and MRC forged an exciting partnership in order to promote the sport and create opportunities for young player participation and development.

To launch the commencement of this formal collaboration, Cornwallis students were invited to submit designs for MRC's new change strip, which will also be adopted as the new academy strip.

The competition received more than 500 entries and Oliver's design was picked as the overall winner.

Students set new fundraising record for Royal National Institute of Blind People

BUSINESS students at MidKent College raised a record-breaking sum of money for the Royal National Institute of Blind People.

A quiz night, raffle, cake sale, auction and blind football competition, were among the activities held to raise £1,307 for the charity – more than double what has been collected in previous years.

But the grand total was even higher thanks to a late £750 donation from ED&F Man in recognition of the students' hard work.

RNIB fundraiser Eileen Haffenden accepted a cheque

CASH: Student fundraisers Sarah Berridge and Mitch Ivory from the Maidstone campus students at a presentation.

She said: "They all really embraced this project and the charity is so thankful for everything they've done."

"When I walked into the quiz night earlier this year I was blown away by the professionalism of it all. I wish the students all the very best for the future."

The students who organised the fundraising were all on the Level 3 Extended Diploma in Business course.

MidKent College also offers higher education courses in business management and entrepreneurship.

AS AMENDED BY THE ROAD TRAFFIC
(TEMPORARY RESTRICTIONS) ACT 1991

Because of carriageway patching, Kent County Council intends to make an Order prohibiting through traffic on Clapper Lane, Staplehurst, on or after 6 November 2012 for up to 2 days or until the works have been completed.

The road will be closed between A229 Maidstone Road and George Street.

The alternative route is via A229 Maidstone Road, George Street.

HIGHWAYS - SEVENOAKS AREA*CROCKENHILL LANE, EYNSFORD, SEVENOAKS
(PROHIBITION OF DRIVING) TEMPORARY ORDER 2012*THE ROAD TRAFFIC REGULATION ACT 1984
(TEMPORARY RESTRICTIONS) ACT 1991

Because of BT works to provide a new telegraph pole for customer connection, Kent County Council intends to make an Order prohibiting through traffic on Crockenhill Lane, Eynsford, Sevenoaks, on or after 29th October 2012 for up to 1 day or until the works have been completed.

The road will be closed from the junction of Eynsford Road and Sparepenny Lane.

There will be no access for through traffic between the junctions with Eynsford Road and Sparepenny Lane.

The alternative route is via: Sparepenny Lane, High Street, Dartford Road, London Road Swanley, Wested Lane Swanley.

Because of drainage improvement works to alleviate flooding, Kent County Council intends to make an Order prohibiting through traffic on Maxted Street, Stelling Minnis, on or after 5 November 2012 for up to 4 weeks or until the works have been completed.

The road will be closed in the vicinity of Maberan Riding Centre (per Elgin), with no access for through traffic between the junctions with Mising Lane and Whatsole Street.

The alternative route is via Whatsole Street, Big Pett and Lymbridge Green.

THE KENT COUNTY COUNCIL
(A259 SCANLONS BRIDGE ROAD, HYPHE, SHEPWAY)
(TOUCAN CROSSING)*ROAD TRAFFIC REGULATION ACT 1984

NOTICE is hereby given that the Kent County Council, in exercise of its powers under Section 23 of the Road Traffic Regulation Act 1984 and all other enabling powers, intends to install a Toucan Crossing on Scanlons Bridge Road, Hythe, Kent. The Toucan Crossing is to replace the existing uncontrolled crossing which is approximately 80 metres north of its junction with Dymchurch Road

The purpose of the scheme is to provide a safe place for pedestrians and cyclists to cross as there are concerns over safety within the area. The existing pedestrian island is used by an increased number of cyclists, school children and shoppers using nearby facilities and a high population from the surrounding residential housing estates.

Toucan Crossings are designed for both pedestrians and cyclists and are typically used adjacent to a shared use footway (Cyclists are not allowed to cross the road using Zebra, Pelican or Puffin crossings). There is a green cycle symbol alongside the green man and the crossing time is established each time by on-crossing detectors. The pedestrians and cyclists in the area would therefore benefit from the introduction of a Toucan Crossing to assist with the high pedestrian / cycle movements throughout the area.

Jacobs Engineering UK LTD. has been commissioned by the Council to publish the Notice of intent at the same time as providing notification to all interested parties and complies with the requirements of Section 23(2) of the Road Traffic Regulation Act, 1984.

Copies of the plan showing this proposal an explanatory statement and a map showing the extents of the scheme may be inspected during normal office hours at

THE KENT COUNTY COUNCIL
(GREAT EASTHALL WAY, SITTINGBOURNE)
(BUSES AND CYCLES) ORDER 2012

Notice is hereby given that KENT COUNTY COUNCIL proposes to make the above named Order under sections 1(1), 2(1) to (3), 3(2), 4(1) and (2), 32(1), 35(1), 45, 46, 49 and 53 of the Road Traffic Regulation Act 1984, the effect of which would be to prohibit vehicles from using Great Easthall Way, Sittingbourne, between its junctions with Oak Road and Freeman Drive, with certain exemptions for buses, cycles and restricted classes of other vehicles.

Full details are contained in the draft Order which, together with the relevant plans and a Statement of Reasons for proposing to make the Order, may be examined during normal office hours at County Hall, Maidstone, Kent, ME14 1XQ or at the offices of the Ashford Highways Depot, Javelin Way, Henwood Industrial Estate, Ashford, Kent TN24 8AD.

Any persons wishing to support or object to the proposal should write to Steve Darling, Ashford Highways Depot, Javelin Way, Henwood Industrial Estate, Ashford, Kent, TN24 8AD or email tro@kent.gov.uk - quoting the name of the Order and stating their reasons, by no later than 12 November 2012.

MILTON ROAD, SITTINGBOURNE
(PROHIBITION OF DRIVING) TEMPORARY ORDER 2012
THE ROAD TRAFFIC REGULATION ACT 1984
(TEMPORARY RESTRICTIONS) ACT 1991

Because of construction works for a new roundabout at the junction with Mill Way, Kent County Council intends to make an Order prohibiting through traffic on Milton Road, Sittingbourne, on or after 5 November 2012 for up to 12 weeks or until the works have been completed.

The road will be closed at the junction with the B2006 Eurolink Way / Mill Way, with no access between the A2 and B2006 using this route.

The alternative route is via A2 St Michael's Road, Crown Quay Lane and B2006 Eurolink Way.

Church Street, Milton will be closed from 5 November 2012 for up to 16 weeks. The road will be closed at its southern end, near Mill Way. There is no alternative route, as the road is a cul-de-sac.

WEST STREET, FAVERSHAM (PROHIBITION OF DRIVING)
THE ROAD TRAFFIC REGULATION ACT 1984
(TEMPORARY RESTRICTIONS) ACT 1991

Because of water mains replacement works, Kent County Council intends to make an Order prohibiting through traffic on West Street, Faversham, on or after 5 November 2012 for up to 6 weeks or until the works have been completed.

The road will be closed in phases between the junctions with Flood Lane and South Road.

The alternative route for vehicles under 7.5t is via Stonebridge Way, Beech Close, Lower Road, and B2040 South Road.

A temporary weight restriction of 7.5t (except buses and access) will be in force in respect of Stonebridge Way, at its junction with Dark Hill.

The alternative for all vehicles over 7.5t is via Dark Hill, Bysing Wood Road, B2045 Western Link, A2 London Road, Ospringe Street, London Road, Canterbury Road, B2040 Love Lane, Whitstable Road, East Street, Crescent Road, Court Street, Quay Lane, Conduit Street and North Lane.

The one-way order in respect of West Street will be suspended from South Road to the point of closure to allow access, when indicated by signage on site.

Whilst Caslocke Street cannot be reached via West Street, the alternative route will be via Fielding Street with a ramp to Hatch Street. The One-way Traffic order in respect of Caslocke Street will then be suspended, for access only.

THE KENT COUNTY COUNCIL
(VARIOUS ROADS, THE BOROUGH OF SWALE)
(WAITING RESTRICTIONS AND STREET PARKING PLACES)
(AMENDMENT NO. 6) ORDER 2012

Notice is hereby given that KENT COUNTY COUNCIL proposes to make the above named Order under sections 1(1), 2(1) to (3), 3(2), 4(1) and (2), 32(1), 35(1), 45, 46, 49 and 53 of the Road Traffic Regulation Act 1984, the effect of which would be to introduce new waiting restrictions in the following roads:

High Street, Eastchurch
Rose Street, Sheerness
Granville Road, Sheerness
Ufton Lane, Sittingbourne

Full details are contained in the draft Order which, together with the relevant plans and a Statement of Reasons for proposing to make the Order, may be examined during normal office hours at County Hall, Maidstone, Kent, ME14 1XQ or at the offices of the Ashford Highways Depot, Javelin Way, Henwood Industrial Estate, Ashford, Kent TN24 8AD.

THE INTERVIEW

Van Morrison

Not fame or money... I do this for love

MUSIC legend Van Morrison takes to the stage at Canterbury's Marlowe theatre this month, bringing both timeless classics and songs from his new album Born To Sing: No Plan B to the cathedral city.

A veteran of the business, his 'Celtic soul' music has its roots in jazz and blues, with albums such as Moondance and Astral Weeks acknowledged as among the most influential ever recorded.

Morrison, originally from Belfast, met BBC Radio presenter John Bennett in his home city to talk about his new work – and started off by explaining its title.

"It seems people have a lot of questions about that," he said. "There isn't really any question. Born To Sing: No Plan B. It is what it says it is. There's no hidden meaning or anything. I don't know why people are always looking for hidden meanings or something else."

"It is what it says on the tin. Singing is my profession. There is no Plan B. Maybe there might be one later on, I don't know."

Morrison outlined his influences and how he most respected musicians who took total control of their work.

"Ray Charles was my role model and he always said he did everything. It's all music and he did everything and he reinvented a couple of things, too, while he was at it."

"And there were guys like Bobby Darin who did everything."

"I mean, Bobby Darin was song-writing before anybody even knew what that was, but he could also do other stuff. He could do folk, he could do Frank Sinatra, you know, so there's people like that who covered all the bases."

Morrison explained that he left his songs open to interpretation from listeners.

"Whatever people want to take out of it, that's it," he said.

"Everybody has got their own interpretation of what they are going to take out of any song. Whether that be nostalgia and they remember where they were, or it reminds them of something else, everyone has got their own interpretation of what they are going to take out of any given song."

"I mean, if you have a painting, 20 people can look at that painting and go 'It's about this'

He's Van the Man to his adoring millions... and the legend is coming to Canterbury or 'It's about that'. It's what you get out of it. That's what it's about.

"So these are ideas – people are going to take out of them what they need or what they want and if they don't need it they are not going to take it, they won't buy into it, but obviously they want to get something that they can put their interpretation on. That's the whole point, I think, of songs."

The second track on the album has the unusual title Going Down To Monte Carlo.

"It seems very strange that you could go to Monte Carlo and find peace, but yeah, hey, that happened to me."

"For one thing, nobody cares. They are too busy with their own lives and they have enough money, so nobody really gives a damn about who you are, really, so that's part of it."

"They're not going to approach you because they are all kind of stars in their own way, so I can be anonymous there."

"Anonymity – people don't realise what a gift it is. They don't realise what they have. People wanting to be famous, they don't know what they're getting into. Anonymity is a gift from God and people don't realise what they have."

Morrison says that commitment to music comes with a "sting".

"The sting is fame because you're not told about that when they tell you 'You were singing in the pram and your granny used to sing these little Scottish melodies to you' and you think 'Yeah, well, that makes sense', but you don't know about all this other crap that you're getting into when you're starting out. When you're starting out, you have no idea."

"See, I've always done this because I love the music. It's like what they say about jazz. You don't do jazz for money, you do it for love."

"Same kind of thing, I'm doing this for love. Not fame, not money, and that's always been the thing – that's why I got into it because I heard people and they did something to me."

LOST IN MUSIC: Van Morrison is still going strong

"They changed my consciousness, they changed my thinking. Something changed within me when I heard these people. So I was like 'Yeah, that's what I want to do because I love it. I want to do that because that is something really...' I don't know what it is. Spiritual?"

"It's something that takes you somewhere else, so that's why I want to do it. But it has taken me into these other areas."

"I've tried to do it without getting into these areas, but because of where we are in history and because we have all this internet, all these magazines, all this hype like fashion, fame, it's only recent. All of this stuff is very recent."

"People used to be into music in my day. They didn't care if someone was like wearing a shiny jacket or something, so people usually got into it."

"Why? Because they loved the music. If you wanted to do it, you had to love it. It was all focused on the music if you were doing what I was doing. It wasn't focused on anything else."

"So that became manipulated by 'Oh yeah, blues. We can sell that!' I came in on that. People tend to forget that's where I came in, as a blues singer. The guy that came from London to The Maritime [Morrison's R&B club in Belfast], he came to hear a blues singer and they wanted to sign a band that had a blues singer."

"So that was my calling card. This is all forgotten now, but that's the reality of how I got to make records. They wanted to sign a blues singer from Belfast. They had several from London, one from Newcastle, a few from other places and they wanted one from here."

"I was doing that music because I loved it. Nobody else here was doing it – they didn't want to know. That's the way it was. It was a different world."

"How many people from that era, apart from The Beatles, can you now name? There were hundreds and hundreds of people and a lot of them were really good. You used to see guys in Germany that were amazing."

"Where are they now? You never hear about them. You only hear about the ones that made it."

An Indian less ordinary, but maybe on another evening

There is an unfounded tradition that if you've had one curry, you've pretty much had them all. 'There's a good curry house in town' is almost as common currency as 'We'll meet up for a beer and a curry', the former equating in truth to no more than there's an Indian restaurant nearby. The 'good' means little if anything, too few people making the effort to differentiate.

And so it was to Curry Leaf that I ventured with a friend on a rainy Thursday night in Ashford (an unpromising backdrop, granted). Late work commitments had caused the abandonment of our initial choice, while, once in town, we learnt that our former Indian venue of choice had metamorphosed into a Thai.

No matter, my pal assured he knew of "a good Indian" in another part of town, although his partner had suffered "a bad meal" on the last visit. A mere blip, he was certain.

Well, we didn't get a rubbish meal. I've had bad Indian food... stand up the place in Barry Island that served all members of our party near-identical splurges of cochineal-heavy muck that tasted much the same whether they were korma or vindaloo.

No, Curry Leaf is not from that pod, but did it serve something a little special, a little out of the ordinary that would demand return visits? Sadly, it didn't. Indeed, I left feeling a touch disappointed. Not horrified, not angered, just a little dissatisfied.

It's hard to say why. The food wasn't particularly badly cooked, while the menu – apart from informing us that the place was under new management and had a new chef and was itself new – offered a number of dishes I hadn't encountered before. Always a good sign and suggestive of the fact that some thought has gone into its composition.

It was, of course, nobody's fault but mine that

I hadn't brought my reading glasses and so struggled to make out quite how many choices lay before me, but here's a tip here for all restaurants – nip out and get a cheap pair for those of us too vain or too dozy to bring our own.

In the event, we shared both our mixed starters and king prawn prozapot (think 'butterfly king prawn' anywhere else), which were both OK.

And OK it remained throughout. My pal seemed content with his lamb rogan and pilau rice, but my duck mirch with mushroom rice didn't stir any great joy in my inner self, the rice being a particular let-down, so much so that I barely half-finished it (and this a dish that I sometimes take in double portions).

The keema naan needed more meat, while the sides of mushroom bhaji and saag aloo disappointed. There, that word again, but know what? I want to go back because flicking again through the menu, this time with glasses on, I know, just know, from the range of dishes at Curry Leaf that this place can lift itself above the ordinary. Don't let me down!

A restaurant keeping to cooking Kentish

SPECIALIST local-cuisine restaurant Curiously Kentish opened at The Goods Shed food hall and farmers' market in Canterbury this week.

The restaurant is the brainchild of Jason Freedman, a county native who is also the owner and head chef of The Minnis restaurant at Birchington. He said that he was opening the venue because of his passion for quality local ingredients and preserving Kent cuisine.

Curiously Kentish will make its own dishes from local ingredients using Kentish culinary influence. Traditional recipes will utilise ancient preserving techniques such as curing or smoking and feature anything from salt-beef sandwiches to cured hams and local salami.

The Ambrette is keen to spread its wings

HIGHLY-rated Indian fine-dining restaurant The Ambrette is to expand from its sites in Margate and Rye.

Chef-patron Dev Biswal has revealed plans to expand his culinary concept to six sites in the South East and London, including at Tunbridge Wells, Sevenoaks, Canterbury and Guildford.

The Ambrette at Rye, which opened in December last year, is already fully booked throughout the week for lunch and dinner and Biswal believes he has found the winning formula for the restaurant:

"It's a combination of the location, the style and concept of food that we're offering."

Souls at sea Demons down at the docks

Sat, October 27-Sun, November 4
01634 823801
www.thedockyard.co.uk

THINGS get spooky and sparkly this autumn half-term at The Historic Dockyard Chatham as visitors explore the eerie and infamous through family activities.

Ghost and Guys activities suitable for all the family include a Guy Fawkes trail, arts and crafts, pumpkin-carving and mask-making.

The ever-popular Megan the Witch will also make a welcome return, with stories of mythical creatures from the deep blue oceans that will enchant rather than scare the younger ones.

Children will learn about ghost ships, superstitions linked to the sea and the monsters and mermaids that either frightened or tempted the sailors of long ago.

Screaming for the big screen Horror movies

Theatre Royal Margate
Saturday, October 27
Doors open at 12.30pm
www.2dayslater.co.uk

KENT'S biggest short-film competition returns this year to Theatre Royal Margate with another creepy programme of horror shorts, just bursting with provocative interpretations of the genre.

The 2 Days Later event is a 48-hour horror genre film-making challenge. It inspires and supports new digital-film-production and has a screening and award ceremony that attracts more than 300 film fans from across the world.

Since 2002 the competition has developed a loyal fan-base, with 122 Kent films being independently financed, produced and screened especially for the Halloween horror film screenings.

Expect some crackers this year with a number of up-and-coming film makers taking part in the action.

Face your real fears The Freak Week test

The Hop Farm, Paddock Wood
Thursday, October 25-Wednesday, October 31
Weekdays 6pm-11pm; weekends, 6pm-midnight
www.hopfarmfreakweek.co.uk

WINNER of the 2011 Screampie Award for best seasonal-scare event, the The Hop Farm brings back Freak Week for another term of torment.

Visitors will be led through dark, twisting labyrinths teeming with nightmare characters and unique special effects.

Raising the scare factor to the next level, Freak Week brings you The Slaughterhouse, Quarantine, The Fun House and The Underground... enter if you dare!

The features have live actors and strobe-lighting and should not be entered by people with claustrophobia.

For tickets, visit the website above.

A mansion of wild mystery Myth or truth?

Port Lympne, near Hythe
Tue and Wed, October 30-31
0844 8424647
info@aspinalfoundation.org

FOR the first time, the mansion at Port Lympne will open its doors for a blood-curdling tour at Halloween.

Nestled in the heart of the wild animal park is a 100-year-old mansion... dripping in history, mystery and myth.

This year the imposing bronze doors will creak open, allowing the intrepid and the fearless to explore the creepy corridors of the building.

Join the lord of the manor as he uncovers frightening and fiendish events that until now have been imprisoned like skeletons in the closet.

Tours run at 6.30pm sharp on both days and places are limited. Tours cost from £10 and £8 for passport-holders. Children must be over 12 years old.

It's the zombie nation Limping to the beat

Herne Bay town centre and The Kings Hall
Monday, October 29-Saturday, November 3
Zombie Crawl is free to enter
www.baypromoteam.co.uk

HERNE BAY is putting on Kent's first six-day Halloween Festival.

There will be Halloween workshops, wizard schools, zombie-accessory-making, pumpkin competitions, a horror double-bill at the cinema, tarot evenings, a giant firework display and a funfair.

Following the success of last year's charity Zombie Crawl in the town, some 1,000 zombies are expected to turn up and stumble around raising money for a good cause.

After the crawl, the 600-capacity Kings Hall will be hosting a Zombie Ball, with sweets and treat for the youngsters and a well-deserved tippie for the adults.

Castle capers Halloween at historic Hever

Hever Castle, Edenbridge
Monday, Oct 29-Monday, Nov 4
01732 865224
www.hevercastle.co.uk

TREAT the children to a fun day out this Halloween at historic Hever Castle.

There's a spine-tingling programme of entertainment, including a pumpkin trail through the grounds to discover the castle's intriguing past.

You can get creative in the Halloween workshops making your own trick-or-treat to take home. There'll be more ghostly goings-on from the Lady of the Wildwoods, who will keep children spellbound with her stories from beyond the grave.

Young visitors can let off steam in the adventure playground and explore the twists and turns of the maze.

Adult tickets are priced at £14.50, children at £8.30 and family tickets at £37.30.

Ghost train The witching hour upon us

KESR, Tenterden
Mon, Oct 29-Friday, Nov 2
01580 765155
www.kesr.org.uk

TAKE a spooky steam-train ride on the Halloween and Fright Night trains at the Kent & East Sussex Railway.

As the clock strikes 6.30pm on October 31 and November 2, you can ride from Tenterden to Northiam station on the Fright Night train.

Once onboard, be prepared to be frightened by ghostly goings-on at the stations... and a few surprises along the way!

There will be spooky entertainment at Tenterden station and you can join the 'make and take' activities, with pumpkin-carving workshops and a fireworks display.

Every child will receive a snack box and spooky free gift for the all-inclusive ticket price of £14.50. Booking is essential.

Trains leave Tenterden station at 10.40am, 11.45am, 1.15pm and 2.45pm.

Slugs, snails, scary tales... Shriek Week

Drusillas Park, Alfriston
Saturday, Oct 27-Monday, Nov 4
01323 874100
www.drusillas.co.uk

SHRIEK Week returns to conjure up all sorts of eerie events to keep your little horrors happy this half-term.

Venture through the creepy cobwebbed corridors of Haunted Heights into the terror-tory of sin sisters Hocus and Pocus as they play hide and shriek with the unsuspecting public.

The derelict castle towers high above the skyline, but deep at the heart of Haunted Heights lies a ghostly secret.

EATING OUT

A real taste of Nepalese and Indian cuisine

THE Everest Inn at Ashford offers fine, upmarket Nepalese and Indian cuisine set in a comfortable, fresh and modern interior with soft lighting and warm ambience.

Diners can enjoy a variety of dishes, from an extensive mouthwatering menu (including huge selections of fresh fish). Food is cooked fresh on the premises using the finest fresh ingredients and spices, offering diners a balanced, flavoursome and delicious taste to remember.

Award-winning chef Shanker Pandey brings the best in Nepalese and Indian cuisine with a modern twist on traditional methods. Shanker continually refines and develops recipes to the highest standard set by The Everest.

Having started in Hythe in 2004, The Everest Inn has a strong philosophy "to provide quality food, exceptional service and outstanding value". And due to success of the team's first branch, a second was opened in Blackheath, London, in 2005 and a third in Grantham, Lincolnshire, in the same year.

And now with the Ashford restaurant also in the portfolio, The Everest Inn has really tasted success. It has been voted best restaurant in Ashford 2012 by Trip Advisor and 2011 Best Nepalese Restaurant UK by Asian Curry Awards.

Westgate Swan is spreading wings

Situated opposite the picturesque West Bay, the eatery has been transformed following the arrival of managing director John Lambie.

The premises was previously known as The Ingleton Hotel, but this was in a real state of disrepair.

During the last eight years, however, a lot of hard work and a considerable amount of investment has led to The Swan spreading its wings and bringing back the public and business it deserves.

The Swan offers multiple facilities, including the main bar, which is an ideal place to enjoy a few relaxing drinks either in the refurbished seating area or in the ornate gardens just 50 yards from the beach.

Swanee's Sports Bar is also available and the place to be if you like sport and good company. There is a 42-inch plasma screen, showing all major sports fixtures.

There is a groundfloor function room and bar, which is available to the local community for those very special events like weddings, birthdays and anniversaries.

The building is also available for businesses, offering conference facilities and catering for up to 100 people, as well as interview rooms and the ability to be fully computerised if required.

The Ingleton Restaurant serves food daily, with quick bar snacks or set lunch menus and special meals, as well as the à la carte offering on Friday and Saturday evenings, including a vast range of quality wines available for the discerning palate.

Online there are example set menus as well as the opportunity to have a peek at the possible Christmas and Boxing Day menus.

Watch out for up coming Halloween events, karaoke nights and live music.

The Swan gives its customers entertainment, good-value food and a fun, friendly atmosphere. As the popular slogan suggests, after all, it's "just a very nice place to be".

Across the county

Marlowe's offers the perfect pit stop for fun and food

SET in the heart of Canterbury's bustling high street and just a stone's throw from the cathedral, Marlowe's restaurant offers something a bit different to other eateries in the area.

Named after the city's famous playwright and just yards from the theatre, Marlowe's makes a great place to grab something to eat before or after a show. Opened in 1984, it is believed to be Canterbury's longest-established restaurant and offers a unique range of meals from across the globe.

Try some of the Mexican dishes, such as fajitas, burritos or a chimichanga. Alternatively, give the Deep South-style barbecue jerk chicken or piri-piri dishes.

From the grill there is a large selection of steaks and burgers – or opt for the more traditional Canterbury Pie or classic fish and chips.

Marlowe's knows how to do a celebration. With decorations and traditional garb, the team is dedicated to making sure customers have a good time, whether it be a spooky Halloween or festive Christmas theme.

The good music and groovy feeling to the restaurant makes for an excellent atmosphere and a fun service. Customers can enjoy soft drinks and beers at the restaurant, but you can also bring your own wine to drink at the table, with no corkage fee charged. There are also children's menus – great for family or Christmas parties.

Marlowe's is open 10.30am-11pm Sunday to Thursday and 10.30am to midnight Friday to Saturday.

Five-star chef takes Vinodhon to the top

MANY diners at the Vinodhon Tandoori restaurant in Hythe already enjoy their hospitality, their comfortable surroundings and, above all, the food.

What diners may not know is that they are enjoying mainly Bangladeshi food (virtually all 'Indian' restaurants serve Bangladeshi or Bengali food), which differs greatly from true Indian cookery.

The Vinodhon is proud to announce that it now has five-star professional chef Mr HR Khan preparing authentic Indian cuisine, including the signature dish Duck Nilgiri, pictured.

Mr Khan has more than 25 years' experience at a five-star hotel and is a professionally-trained and qualified chef, specialising in the art of Indian cuisine.

He has been working for more than 16 years with international-standard five-star Oberoi hotels – India's largest five-star group of hotels – and brings his wealth of skill and knowledge to the popular Vinodhon restaurant.

Diners will be able to experience authentic

Indian fish, duck and seafood dishes to suit all tastes, as well as many other fabulous meals from Mr Khan. However, regular diners to the Vinodhon will still be able to order their favourite dishes as well.

The restaurant is open from midday to 2.30pm and 6.30pm-11.30pm every day and even offers a special banquet night every Tuesday evening.

Watch out for the special Thali night, which will soon have a regular slot on Sunday evenings. It is believed to be the first Thali evening available in the county.

So pop into the Hythe restaurant and sample the spices and flavours of the true taste of India.

Short-listed Luke is more than a boy as competition heats up

ACCLAIMED 18-year-old singer-songwriter Luke Jackson has been selected as a finalist in the 2013 BBC Radio 2 Folk Awards.

Jackson, who launched his debut album More Than Boys at Shrewsbury Folk Festival last month, has been named as one of 10 finalists in the national radio station's annual search for the UK's most talented young performers of folk, roots or acoustic music.

Previous competitors and winners include Tim van Eyken, Jackie Oates, Jim Moray, Bella Hardy, Uiscedwr, Moore Moss Rutter and Jarlath Henderson.

Finalists will take part in workshops at the Young Folk Award Weekend before performing in a public concert hosted by DJ Mike Harding.

A panel of judges will select four nominees for the 2013 BBC Radio 2 Young Folk Award and the eventual winner will be announced at the BBC Radio 2 Folk Awards ceremony early next year.

The winners' prizes include the opportunity to record a session for Radio 2 and perform at top UK festivals in 2013, including the prestigious

TALENTED: Luke Jackson

Cambridge Folk Festival.

With a bold voice and honed guitar skills, Canterbury-based Jackson is a confident performer, having already supported groups like Show Of Hands, Steve Knightley and Boo Hewerdine.

The singer has also appeared as a guest on BBC Radio 2's Good Morning Sunday, interviewed by Aled Jones. His 11-track debut album is a riff-layered CD that draws inspiration from memories of childhood camaraderie; a lyrical real-time journey to young adulthood.

This summer Jackson was selected from some 1,000 entries as a finalist in the Beautiful Days Festival Singer Songwriter Competition, organised in conjunction with Acoustic Magazine.

Marlene happy to (still) bare all as she returns to Calendar Girls role

By Joe Bill

joe.bill@archant.co.uk

SHE is probably best known for her flirtatious meetings with Derek Trotter, but the woman behind Marlene Boyce is ready to bare all... again.

Sue Holderness returns to Kent in her fourth stint as part of the Calendar Girls team and the cool winter air has done nothing to discourage the former Only Fools And Horses star from getting her kit off.

She said: "I love it and the best thing is that the cast is almost the same as one I have toured with before. So it's a bit like coming home – we all know each other well."

"It is an extraordinary show. There are moments when the audience will be uncontrollably laughing and other, rather gentler, more moving, times."

The show, which has also been made into a film, is based on the true story of a group from the Women's Institute in Yorkshire who pose nude for a calendar to raise money for cancer treatments.

"I think all of us have been touched by cancer. So there are moments people find very emotional."

"You hear at the end that these extraordinary women have now raised around £4million for leukaemia research, so there are people out there whose lives have been saved by this incredible story."

CHARITABLE LADIES: The Calendar Girls story has been acted out both on stage and silver screen

But, of course, to play the role the actresses have to strip in front of the wandering eyes of the audience.

"I remember the first time we all got together before the 2009 tour – it was the very day I got my senior bus pass. I was thinking 'What am I doing here? I am an Old Age Pensioner taking my clothes off in front of people I've never met.'"

The show itself is choreographed brilliantly and the audience get the idea that they see much more than they do.

"The stage-hands, of course, see everything, but they long ago stopped looking, which I suppose is slightly depressing."

Holderness will be forever remembered as the long-suffering wife of south London wide-boy Boycie in John Sullivan's classic sitcom, a typecast that the actress looks back on fondly.

"People still call out the Marlene catchphrase and even do the Boycie laugh. When that stops, I will be incredibly sad – I love it. And because it's still on TV all the time there's a whole new generation of fans who are watching it now."

"I always used to switch off, but they are so far away now that I don't think about how I could have done that better, because it's too late."

"There are still episodes I haven't seen. Now it's far enough away, so I actually watch and think 'I didn't look bad' because at the time you think you were too fat or ugly, but now, 20 years on, I wish I had realised I didn't look bad back then!"

Always go native for wildlife

LUCY'S PATCH

by LUCY HEWETT

VERY soon now, the leaves will be falling from the trees and we will be entering the planting season.

These next five months, the dormant season to the end of March, is the time when it's best to do your tree- and shrub-planting. Getting the majority in before Christmas is the ideal, as the roots will have time to settle before spring.

If you are thinking of planting a hedge, please consider a native hedge as they are home to a host of plants and animals that improve our environment considerably. Stock plants are cheap if you buy them bare-rooted in bundles of 10.

A plain hawthorn hedge is great, but for diversity use it as a 50 per cent foundation and weave into the mix wild rose, hazel, wild cornus, guelder rose and wild privet. These additions will provide a range of flowers and berries to attract the birds and add seasonal interest. For the fastest results, plant a double row, staggered a foot apart, with about five plants per metre.

Cut the young whips back by half to help promote denser growth from the base. Whether you are planting natives or a crisper, more culti-

SUMMER HARVEST: To be sure of a good crop next year, now is the time to plant your raspberries and bone per square metre, and keep the base of the hedge weed-free with a mulch or mulch mat. Obviously, winter planting will reduce the need for watering but, if you can, try to water still once a month between now and April.

As it is the time for cutting faded stems, try not to be too overzealous with the autumn clear-up as a wealth of plants comes into its own in the winter. Hydrangea heads, bleached-out ornamental grasses and the skeletons of perennials such as sedum and eryngium are not only of interest aesthetically but also provide cover and habitat for over-wintering insects.

Leaves can be left in the beds, where plants are robust enough to cope with the natural mulch, but remove them from small perennials and Mediterranean herbs that like the air around them to keep them from rotting in winter.

Also, pick up diseased leaves from the base of roses to stop them harbouring blackspot. Buddleia, clematis, wisteria and anything potentially tender should be left until the back end of winter to avoid die-back in hard frosts.

Jobs to do this month

Check variegated shrubs for plain green shoots and prune them away.

Send off for mail-order seed catalogues and start preparing your planting wish list.

Continue/finish planting up your spring-flowering bulbs, including tulips, as soon as possible, preferably before the ground loses the heat of the summer. Winter wet in combination with cold is the biggest killer on heavy soils. Throw a handful of bulbs and plant them where they fall to create a natural drift effect. The general rule of thumb for planting is that two to three times the size of the bulb is the depth you need to dig.

In the fruit and veg patch

• If you have not opted to plant green manure, as suggested last month, in any bare veg beds, dig and manure veg beds with some organic matter instead – this will greatly improve soil structure.

• Insulate your greenhouse with polythene.

• Check fruit in storage and remove any that are showing signs of rot.

• Pruning: as soon as the leaves are down, you can start to winter prune fruit – please refer to RHS The Fruit Garden Display for reference as this is a reasonably complex exercise. However, stone fruit should never be pruned in the winter as the sap is being drawn back into the trees and the airborne spores of silver leaf can be drawn back into the vascular system at the same time.

• Sow hardy peas such as Douce Provence.

• Plant out wallflowers, forget-me-nots, pansies and other spring bedding.

• For raspberries next summer, plant bushes now – try Autumn Bliss or Joan J and have yourself a double crop of sweet fruits; instead of cutting down all the canes in winter, only cut half to give you a summer and autumn crop.

The winter months shouldn't be all gloom and doom, although my Terry definitely thinks it is and every day insists on telling me how much earlier it has got darker than the day before.

Bring some colour and beautiful scent into your home in time for Christmas by forcing scented narcissus Paperwhites indoors: settle bulbs on a layer of glass marbles or pebbles in clear vases and keep water levels just below the base of the bulbs.

I am sure you will be grateful of these sweet-smelling pretty lovelies in the depths of winter.

Wood Stoves – Range Cookers – Refrigeration – Fireplaces – Gas Fires – Firewood

2012 had the wettest summer for 100 years but whatever the skies throw at us next a trip to Heat Design is sure to help you keep prepared and - most importantly - warm this winter. With friendly, passionate and independent advice, Heat Design in Canterbury has everything you need to get your family ready for the winter.

As a way of heating your home, the humble wood stove has come on a long way. Modern models are highly efficient, safe and beautifully designed. Clean air technology allows many wood stoves to be used in a smoke control area while reducing their environmental impact. The efficiency of the burn means lower fuel costs and more heating for your money.

From traditional to contemporary styling, Heat Design stock hundreds of different models from leading brands such as Chesney's, Hunter, Euroheat, Barbas, Dovre, Yeoman, Stovax, Rais and Woodwarm. Some larger models can also heat hot water.

If you are considering fireplace options, we have many on display in our showroom, beautifully handcrafted in stone, marble and solid timber, from brands such as Chesney's, Montpellier Marble and Farmington. If you want to restore a period house to its former glory or create an authentic look for a more modern home you can be confident that you will find what you are looking for; from a simple timeless design to blend in with any decor or select a mantelpiece faithfully reproduced and hand finished for a classic period feel to your room. A surround can be used to create a traditional, classic setting with a wood stove, period insert or an open fire.

Another option is gas. Gas fires provide a centre piece for a room. Push button convenience with contemporary gas fires enables them to be turned on and off, up and down at the touch of a remote control, combining ease of use with great modern flame effects and high efficiency levels.

From the traditional cottage to the ultra chic apartment our huge range of gas fires means that there is one to suit any interior. Our expert staff are on hand to guide you to the right choice and help you through buying and installing a new gas fire. Heat Design also stock a range of the latest gas fuel efficient fires from top brands such as Gazco and Bellfires.

A beautiful cast iron range cooker can be a focal point of the kitchen, at the centre of the home. At Heat Design we do everything we can to help you choose the range cooker best suited to you. We stock a selection of range cookers from the best manufacturers including Aga, Rayburn, Steel Cuisine and Big Blue.

The Rayburn allows you to integrate your range cooker into a hot water system and heat your home as well as cook. If you are considering purchasing a Rayburn, they are offering £500 off all their models until October 15th and our in-house Raburn Guild heating engineer can guide you through installation into existing systems.

So be inspired this autumn, and come and view our range... We look forward to working with you soon.

Warm glow of saving money

AN innovative radiator reflector that could save big money on household heating bills is now on the market. The Radflek – which reflects radiator heat that would otherwise be lost back into a room – has now received an Energy Saving Trust Recommended label.

Most radiators direct some 40 per cent of their radiated heat towards the wall behind. Radflek reflects this heat back into the room – primarily into the radiator – so that the radiator maintains its operating temperature using less energy with a lower load on the boiler.

Elaine Berry, of the Energy Savings Trust, said: "Having an efficient and cost-effective heating system is one of the main steps you can take to reduce your energy consumption and carbon-dioxide emissions, and Radflek radiator reflectors are an excellent means of helping your radiators work more efficiently."

Michael Watson, Radflek chief executive, said: "Thousands of householders are facing significant gas and electricity price rises as a raft of cheap energy deals come to an end, and price increases across the big six energy suppliers are expected in October. With winter looming and the fact that many houses in Britain do not retain heat well, now is the time to get Radflek behind your radiators."

Dave Hoffman recently installed the device in his three-bedroom, semi-detached house in Aylesford.

The property had been built just 10 years earlier and was already well insulated. However, rising energy bills led Mr Hoffman to look for other ways to make his heating more efficient and economical.

He said: "I think most people are looking for ways to save money and there are several things one can do at home to improve energy efficiency. It seemed logical to me that it would be more efficient to redirect the radiator heat that is going backwards, so I found Radflek as a solution."

"The great thing about Radflek is we felt the results immediately: as soon as I put them behind the radiators, we could feel more heat coming in to the room and we were able to turn the thermostat down. Radflek is clearly saving us money on our heating bills."

HOT STUFF: The Radflek reflects the heat from your radiator back into the room

... and fitting solar panels can help, too

RESEARCH reveals how almost 5 million people living in the South East have no idea how much they might expect to save on their total energy bill by installing solar panels.

The average annual saving per household is estimated at £830.47 and homeowners also add value to their property by investing in the solar panels.

Meanwhile, almost 50,000 homeowners say the main reason they haven't installed solar panels is that they think a lack of sunshine means they won't work properly. In reality, solar panels work in all daylight weather conditions.

The Green Home Company, a provider of renewable-energy systems, says when looking at saving money on energy bills, 4.8 million people in the region are unaware solar panels can help them pay less. But the company says homeowners can expect to save up to 50 per cent off their energy bills by installing solar panels.

Industry data indicate the average household spends £1,200 per year on energy bills. This is predicted to rise significantly in the coming years as result of rising costs.

John Benner, managing director at The Green Home Company, said: "Clearly, people really aren't fully aware of just how easy it is to save money with solar panels."

"With energy bills predicted to increase dramatically, people need to be armed with the correct information about how much money they can save as, in the vast majority of cases, it's significantly more than they might think. Solar panels are an effective way of combating rising utility costs and we encourage everyone to investigate their home's potential today."

Birds count... and so can you!

Our gardens are brighter and better places for the birds that visit or live in them – and you have the chance to help monitor how they are faring.

The weekend of Saturday and Sunday, January 26-27, sees Big Garden Birdwatch, the annual monitoring of the UK's avian population by the Royal Society for the Protection of Birds.

The charity is asking volunteers to spend an hour recording the maximum number of each species they see at any one time.

An RSPB spokesman said: "By giving up one hour of your day, you'll be making a real difference to our knowledge of garden birds. We'll be able to distinguish the ones that are doing well from those that need our help.

"Life's so busy – how often do you get to sit back and really notice the wildlife around you?"

■ House Sparrow

One of the most cosmopolitan of all birds. Its population is normally highest where humans live, its spread and distribution following closely that of human settlements.

■ Starling

■ Blue Tit

Blue Tits breed in their first year and pair formation takes place in the winter after moulting the previous year's feathers.

■ Blackbird

This species can breed up to four times a year. It usually lays up to five speckled-brown, blue-green eggs. The incubation time is 13-14 days on average.

■ Chaffinch

Chaffinches have been known to live for a remarkable 14 years.

■ Woodpigeon

This is a bird that has made a strong advance into towns from the country.

■ Goldfinch

Goldfinches build their nests on the outer twigs at the end of a branch; they particularly favour fruit trees.

■ Great Tit

A species perhaps best known for its piercing 'Teacher! Teacher!' song, which sounds very much like a bicycle pump and is usually heard in the spring and summer.

■ Robin

Robins first appeared on Christmas cards as a representation of Victorian postmen, who wore red tunics and were known as 'redbreasts'. They are also associated with Christmas because they hold territories by singing in the winter.

■ Collared Dove

Collared Doves aren't great nest-makers –

sometimes chicks fall through the flimsy branches. Collared Doves are chiefly vegetarian, finding most of their food from the ground or on bird tables.

■ Dunnock

Dunnocks are well known for 'trios', with a female and two males attending a nest.

■ Magpie

Magpie numbers have quadrupled in the last 35 years. This is a direct result of the reduction in persecution as lowland game-keeping declined. Their population was at a low-point in the 1960s and it increased until the late 1980s; for the past 20 years it has remained fairly constant.

■ Long-tailed Tit

The Long-tailed Tit makes a tennis-ball-sized nest out of moss and spiders' webs. As the fluffy chicks grow, the nest expands around them. If a breeding attempt fails, the pair will split up and go to the nest of a sibling to help raise the chicks.

■ Greenfinch

In spring, the males perform a wonderful display flight, looking more like butterflies. They sing a simple but musical song.

■ Wren

After a male wren has attracted one mate, it will go out and secure a second... or even more!

■ Visit www.rspb.org.uk/birdwatch if you would like to take part in Big Garden Birdwatch 2013.

Council makes letting a home easy as ABC

THE private rented housing sector is a popular option for many families, but they are often prevented from accessing it because they cannot afford to pay large amounts of rent in advance, high deposits and fees.

This means they often ask a council for assistance in finding suitable accommodation in the private rented sector.

This year Ashford Borough Council's cabinet members agreed to proceed with creating ABC Lettings (A Better Choice Lettings agency for Ashford). The service has been designed to help landlords offer properties for rent to households the council has identified as being on local housing allowance rent levels.

The first landlords have now begun to sign up to the scheme, meaning the council conducts all the relevant checks on the prospective tenants and then brokers a tenancy agreement between the applicant and landlord.

With one option, the landlord has the guarantee that rent will be paid for the duration of the tenancy plus the reassurance the tenancy will be fully managed.

Cliff Johnson, one of the first landlords to sign up to the scheme, said: "ABC Lettings appealed to me as it is a hassle-free option. It enables me to be a landlord, but at arm's length. Landlords can be reassured things will be managed for them, freeing their time up, particularly if they live outside the borough."

ABC Lettings has been devised in anticipation of a further reduction in funding from central government, the benefit reform and the potential knock-on effects of the troubled economic climate being experienced.

Operating in a similar way to a high-street lettings agency, ABC Lettings focuses its attention on tenants who are normally seen as high risk when often they are refused simply because they can not meet the requirements of agents or landlords.

Furthermore, the National Landlords Association has confirmed schemes of this nature do not compete with high-street agencies.

DEVELOPER Berkeley has opened its new show apartment at Victory Pier, its flagship development overlooking the River Medway in Gillingham.

The two-bedroom show apartment showcases the style, practicality and benefits of living in this location.

Berkeley's high specification is evident throughout, with contemporary fitted kitchens hosting energy-efficient integrated appliances including oven, hob, fridge-freezer, washer-dryer and dishwasher.

Bathrooms have ceramic floor and wall tiling and sanitary ware from Roca.

The living space is open-plan and each apartment has a balcony or terrace. The master bedroom has a fitted wardrobe and in two- and three-bedroom apartments has an en-suite shower room. The interior design of the showhome was undertaken for Berkeley by Blocc Interiors.

The first homes in Marina Heights are due for completion in summer 2013.

Fifteen homes have already been reserved off-plan, including four buyers who rented in the first phase. The Boathouse, and appreciated the development so much they've decided to buy in the new phase.

Victory Pier is regenerating this 20-acre site into a waterside community set within

IT'S one thing to have an affordable and surprisingly practical new coupé, but it has to have some image, too.

And this is a gaping hole now plugged by Hyundai with a more muscular flagship to head a Veloster range that had, frankly, been missing a bit of velocity.

The new Veloster Turbo is almost a different beast, being visually, dynamically and aurally much changed from the rather humdrum launch version.

Hyundai says the latter will still deliver most sales, but the new Turbo will surely drive the image of the range as a whole and attract keener drivers, deservedly so even if it's up against tough rivals in a sharply-defined market niche led by the VW Scirocco, Vauxhall Astra GTC and Renault Megane.

The new Toyota GT86/Subaru BRZ cooperative venture also deserves a mention both on price and driver appeal, though it won't challenge the Hyundai on creature comforts and interior style.

In truth, though, the Hyundai still doesn't quite have the handling sharpness to attack any of these cars head-on as a sporting coupé, even though the 1.6-litre petrol turbo engine delivers loads more low-down punch compared with the unblown GDi version and will hit 62mph in 8.2 seconds against 9.7.

But then it's not just about power and speed here; the Veloster Turbo also looks the part with a beefed-up front end, including a deeper radiator grille, and prominent twin exhausts and diffuser at the back. Sideskirts add to the powerful stance of the car.

It even has its own colour palette, too, including a matt grey – not cheap at an extra £525, but maybe money well spent to those who like the stealth-fighter look.

And, of course, there's the Veloster's unique ace-up-the-sleeve: a extra door on the kerbside allowing easy access for passengers in the back, particularly ideal for those who want a racy motor without the hassle of tipping front seats or leaning right into the back to belt up the kids.

Admittedly, it doesn't look promising in there for anyone over the age of 10, thanks to that wickedly-raked rear roof, but access is surprisingly good and I found it pretty easy to slide across to the other side.

The third door is cleverly integrated into the car's profile and, since you never view both sides together, you won't spot the difference unless you go for the schizophrenic effect of sitting in the front and glancing over each shoulder in quick succession.

Typically, the specification is generous, with this new T-GDi flagship selling at a tempting £21,995 backed by Hyundai's five-year/unlimited mileage warranty, and including leather seats – the driver's is electrically adjustable – and a seven-inch multifunction touchscreen display for eight-speaker sounds, sat-nav and reverse-parking camera.

Kia re-Ceeding market appeal

By Steve Loader

editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

KIA'S impressive design supremo and former Audi star Peter Schreyer could do little more than sign off the previous Kia Ceed profile when he arrived at the Korean car-maker.

This time around, his signature is writ large across the car; it's altogether more stylish and features Kia's Schreyer-inspired and now trademark 'tiger nose' grille flanked by distinctive swept-back headlamp clusters with upmarket LED running lights.

For on-road presence it need not doff its cap to rivals and it is now a formidable challenger to the family hatchback sector leader, the VW Golf – a car that Kia admits was the key benchmark in the new Ceed's development.

What's even more impressive, though, is how quickly Kia has achieved this near-parity with the VW star – no one would have bet on this 10 years ago, before the original Ceed was conceived.

When it arrived in 2007, it was a game-changer, conceived and built in Europe for Europe and highlighting Kia's progress and value for money, also pioneering the brand's incredible and still unchallenged worry-free seven-year/100,000-mile warranty.

From that, the marque has built several other new stars; the second-generation Ceed (from £14,395) seems set to kick on from there.

In some areas, it still cannot quite compete with the Golf and its other big rivals, the Ford Focus and Vauxhall Astra, but it looks good and still offers value, with acclaimed reliability backed by that warranty, while you sense that badge snobbery against the brand is on the wane – buying a Ceed can be a smart choice rather than one made to please the wallet.

Where does it fall short, then?

Well, keen drivers may find the handling less interesting and, despite useful 'comfort', 'normal' and 'sporty' settings for the steering, you don't get too much feedback from it – certainly

MOVER AND SHAKER:

Kia has made huge strides with its Ceed and now has a family hatchback that could seriously threaten the dominance of the market-leading VW Golf and other big rivals the Ford Focus and Vauxhall Astra not compared with rivals mentioned previously.

But most buyers won't worry about any of this and simply enjoy the car's solidity and build quality, a roomy cabin with good rear legroom, a decent-size boot and a dashboard that mirrors the quality and practicality of the Golf but shows more flair.

As I said after my first drive of the car earlier in the year, I'm not convinced of the quality of the seats in terms of comfort and trimming unless you go for leather, but I'm sure Kia will address this later – this is a brand that has shown it really does listen to media and consumer comment.

And it does look like I'm nit-picking when you consider the high equipment levels.

The range is offered with a choice of 1.4- and 1.6-litre engines in both petrol or diesel, and all of the manual 1.6 versions get Kia's eco-friendly ISG (intelligent stop and go) package.

In the case of the mid-spec Ceed 2 1.6CRDi test car, this gives you the equivalent of the VW Golf BlueMotion eco star for £18,295 – almost two grand less and with more standard goodies including Bluetooth and cruise control – and with the same capability to escape road tax and average more than 70mpg.

I've no experience of the 1.4 Ceed but would say the 1.6 petrol alternative is also worth a look (from £17,195) for those not racking up enough miles to justify spending extra on the diesel; it's livelier, though surprisingly vocal about it compared with the diesel, yet will still average a creditable 50mpg or thereabouts with the ISG and eco features.

For those needing just a bit more space, there is a newly-launched and stylish estate or SW – as Kia prefers – with the prospect of a racy three-door Proceed later

Toledo rides the road again

SEAT re-launches the Toledo name on Saturday, December 1, in the form of a value-for-money car (from £12,495) to sit between its Ibiza supermini and the forthcoming Leon hatchback replacement.

Volkswagen's Spanish arm last used the Toledo name on an MPV axed some three years ago. Its belated replacement looks like a small saloon but has a hatchback for added versatility.

Alfa makes an attractive deal

GLAMOROUS Italian car brand Alfa Romeo has unveiled tempting autumn finance packages, starting at just £169 a month plus deposit for its sporting MiTo three-door supermini.

Deals for the bigger five-door Alfa Giulietta, left, start at £199 a month plus deposit.

The MiTo entry offer is on the 1.3 Diesel 85bhp Sprint, which is Congestion Charge and road tax-exempt.

More choice with Volvo V40

VOLVO has added more eye-catching models to the smart new V40 five-door hatchback line-up.

They are the racy looking V40 R-Design and V40 Cross Country, priced from £22,295 and £22,595 respectively.

R-Design, above, highlights its reprofiled front bumper and rear diffuser, five-spoke 17-inch alloys and sporty cabin, while its sister gets roof rails and the rugged off-road look.

Putting the Mokkas on the Qashqai set?

By Steve Loader

editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

FOR a while, Vauxhall held a strong position in a UK 4x4/SUV market that exploded in the 1990s.

What its Frontera model lacked in sophistication, it more than made up for in rugged style and affordability – a lengthy sales life (1991-2003) speaks volumes.

But by the time the axe fell, the Frontera had been outclassed and, inexplicably, Vauxhall had nothing waiting to replace it – maybe management of the time thought that SUVs would be a passing fad.

It was 2007 before Vauxhall re-entered the fray with the Antara. It was pitched more upmarket than the Frontera, a powerful argument perhaps for not re-using the old model name and reviving associations with a rather more primitive type of 4x4.

Unfortunately, the newcomer was a little too full of itself; the Antara looked pricey against the closely-related Captiva from Vauxhall's value-driven sister brand, Chevrolet.

Worse, you could have a Captiva with seven seats – the Antara maxed at five.

Adding insult to injury, Nissan had also rethought the whole 4x4/SUV deal and come up with the excellent Qashqai, mixing in family hatchback and MPV appeal, too, and creating the new 'crossover' segment of the car market.

Others rushed to copy or reposition their compact SUV models, so we now have impressive Qashqai wannabes such as the Skoda Yeti, Kia Sportage and Peugeot 3008.

Finally, Vauxhall has responded with a rival of

BETTER BY DESIGN: Vauxhall has re-entered the SUV sector with its all-new impressive Mokka substance: the newly-arrived Mokka – a would-be Qashqai killer.

Priced from an attractive £15,995, it's a smart-looking car – both muscular and sporty and sitting on 18-inch alloys as standard.

In this it maintains the high-quality design style of recent Vauxhalls and includes the brand's signature 'blade' motif on its flanks.

Vauxhall says the Mokka offers new standards of comfort and agility for the chassis.

Equally important, though, will be Vauxhall's big dealer network and company-car market clout; the model line-up includes a Tech Line trim aimed specifically at tax and perks-conscious company-car user-choosers.

Vauxhall says the crossover/compact SUV sector has shown impressive growth – up 7 per cent in the first half of 2012 against the same period last year – and reckons the Mokka will appeal to those with active lifestyles.

No surprise, then, to see that Mokka options include the brand's retractable FlexFix bicycle-carrier.

But they won't necessarily be people who want to 'yomp' over rugged terrain; like many of its peers, the Mokka will be sold with front-wheel-drive as well as 4x4 rig, and more than half of buyers are expected to go for the former's greater economy.

With running costs in mind, 42 per cent of buyers are also expected to order the 1.7CDTi diesel, offering an official combined cycle 62.8mpg and 120g/km CO<sub>2</sub> emissions in front-wheel-drive format. Petrol units will take remaining sales: 1.4-litre turbocharged (20 per cent) and 1.6-litre petrol (38 per cent).

The new Vauxhall Mokka

It's the sub-compact SUV that's larger than life. The Mokka balances a sense of adventure with fuel-saving engines and the very latest safety systems. Available on Vauxhall's Flex Finance 5 years 0% APR representative with nil deposit required***

The official fuel consumption figures in mpg (l/100km) for the Renault Clio 1.2 16V 3dr are: Urban 37.2 (7.6); Extra Urban 57.7 (4.9); Combined 48.7 (5.8). The official CO<sub>2</sub> emission figure is 135g/km.

**Discounted price includes additional Renault UK Support and is in lieu of Le Style Pack. **4+ package is included as standard on eligible vehicles. The value of the package (with the exception of Twizy) is based on £80 for 4th year Roadside Assistance cover and between £305 and £720 for 4th year warranty cover, depending on the Renault model. Servicing also varies between £589 to £1,214 depending on vehicle and servicing in line with manufacturer's minimum maintenance programme based on an average national hourly labour rate of £70. Figures for illustration purposes only. No cash alternative. Vehicles are covered by a warranty package for up to 48 months. The first 2 years are unlimited mileage, followed by a further 2 years up to 100,000 miles. Please see warranty terms and conditions (www.renault.co.uk/warranty) for further details. Servicing offer covers cars for 4 years or 48,000 miles and vans for 4 years or 80,000 miles, whichever comes first. Services must be carried out in line with the manufacturer's minimum maintenance programme requirements and servicing intervals, and can only be carried out at a Renault Approved UK outlet. Renault Assistance Roadside Cover provided from month 0 to 36 includes assistance at the roadside and home, national recovery, onward travel and European cover. ## Strikers delivering the goods, says Forster

DOVER boss Nicky Forster has backed his strikers to continue their good run of form.

Billy Bricknell, and Ben May have struck up a partnership that's yielded five goals in the last four games. It's also kept summer signing Callum Willock out of the side, and it's that strength in depth that Forster feels is important as the season heads towards winter.

"Ben May is on a good run of form with Billy Bricknell," he said. "The pair have scored goals and are near double figures between them. They are doing well to keep Callum Willock out of the side. There's good competition for places."

FORM: Forster is happy

"I always said from the start, I don't want to be relying on myself to play. At the moment we are on good form, and I've got a slight knee problem at the moment so I can't play anyway."

"I have rotated the squad at times this year. We have got a good balance and we have used pretty much all the players. That strength in depth is going to be vital for us."

The competition for places is set to hot up in the next month or so as striker Terry Dixon returns to action from injury.

"I'm not actually looking for anyone else, we have got Terry Dixon who's coming back, so there will be competition for places," he said. "I would imagine he will be out for another three to six weeks. I would think he would be fit within three weeks, but whether he's physically fit to get back I'm not sure."

Instead of normal training on Tuesday night, Forster organised a inter-squad game at the Crabble to make up for the fact Saturday's Blue Square South game against Truro City was cancelled as they were set to go bust. They have since had a reprieve as talks over their survival continue.

It also gave him and his management team a chance to do some scouting instead.

"I would rather have not had the game called off," he said. "I did try and get a game organised, but because of the lateness of the call from the Conference it didn't give us a lot of time."

"As soon as we knew it was called off, we went and watched a number of games looking at future opponents."

RUGBY

Little brings a big presence and Fijian fun to coaching role at school

By Greg Miles

greg.miles@archant.co.uk

WITH his first full school term nearly under his belt, Fiji legend Nicky Little is feeling at home in his new Canterbury surroundings.

The all-time leading points scorer for the South Pacific island, and one of a handful of stars to play at four Rugby World Cups, started his job as director of rugby at Simon Langton School, and Canterbury High School at the beginning of the summer in a role that also links in Canterbury Rugby Club.

The fly-half's career on the pitch came to an end last season as he played in the Championship for Esher, after returning from the World Cup in New Zealand where he grew up.

Before then he'd toured the Continent playing for Saracens and Bath, while also turning out for sides in Italy and France.

He then got in touch with the Rugby Players' Association who helped him get the coaching certificates which he proudly displays at his desk.

Although his job might be a coach, he's adamant the title doesn't fit in with his ethos.

"I still don't want to be a coach, I want to be a friend of whoever's underneath me, a friend who tells them short-cuts," said Little.

"I want to keep rugby fun, I'm hoping people are learning and having fun rather than just learning because they have to – that's my plan."

"I would just like the guys I'm in touch with to enjoy rugby, pursue it if they want, even if they don't go pro, just go down to their local club and enjoy it."

"Because my job has been professional, churning and grinding every week, I have never wanted to be a coach to win. Winning rugby is generally about percentages, kicking corners and crushing opponents to death rather than playing like Fiji."

"We (Fiji) would rather try to score 10 tries and lose 3-0. People come to watch that. If you want to win and go pro, there's a way, but it's not the only way. There's no right or wrong way."

"I don't want to step on anyone's toes, but if they come to me and ask how to do things I will tell them."

COACH:

Nicky Little, who played for Bath among others, is hoping to put fun back into rugby at lower levels having lost a bit of love for the game in his pro career

"I had a game for Canterbury thirds two weeks ago, it was the best time of my rugby life in 15 years, it was fun."

Coaching hadn't been the aim but after going on the courses he found it the perfect match: "I went onto the courses thinking 'who cares about this?' But then I opened my mind. After the first session I said to the guy 'I have never learnt so much'. After that I was really impressed with my two teachers."

"There's lots of old boys out there like me who are trying to find work, and who's going to spend money on dumb rugby players like me? I'm lucky that this worked out and I'm loving it so far. I'm coaching rugby and weights all week, I'm not saving the world here."

"There's always pressure to perform, but nowhere near that of a pro sports person. That is the number one factor why old guys like myself from rugby go into these teaching jobs."

"I watch TV and see all my old mates still doing it and I think 'I'm so glad I'm not a part of that any more'. I know nothing is permanent, but a permanent job is the hook."

Growing up in New Zealand, a rugby ball was put in his hands from an early age. The fact his uncles were pro players helped, as did having All Blacks legend Eric Rush as a regular visitor to the house.

"New Zealand is rugby mad, you don't have a choice," he said. "It's just what you learn. I remember wrestling with uncles in the lounge and smashing windows, isn't that everyone else's experience too?"

He said he felt there are too many egos in the professional game at present, and he's happy to be one of the good guys.

"Who cares if I have or haven't won the World Cup, I'm proud of being one of the good guys I suppose," he said.

"It's no good if you've won the World Cup and you're drinking by yourself. We've seen the superstars come and go."

MOTORSPORT

Byrne hopes for fourth title, but MotoGP is an option

SHANE Byrne admits there is a tinge of disappointment in claiming his record-equalling third British Superbike Championship title.

The 35-year-old rode into the history books in commanding fashion at Brands Hatch last weekend claiming all three races of the final of the three title-deciding Showdowns. He had only jumped to the top of the leader board at the previous round, having trailed all season in his bid to add to his 2003 and 2008 triumphs.

That disappointment comes from a desire to not just follow in the footsteps of other triple champions Niall Mackenzie and Ryuichi Kiyonari, but to become the best.

"In some ways it's the most disappointing title win," said the Sittingbourne rider. "I'm a three-time champion, but people have done that already, I don't want to do what has already been done I want to be the best. A big part of me wants to win a fourth."

With his team, Paul Bird Motorsport, involved in MotoGP it remains to be seen whether he will be back to challenge for his fourth title.

"I honestly don't know. The decision will be made in the next 10 days or two weeks I think," he said. "But for now I can rest quite comfortably in the knowledge I'm a three-time champion."

"I want to stay with my team, but my team have two competitions to think about, the MotoGP and BSB."

It was feared he may not even put up a fight as the season drew to its nail-biting conclusion. A crash at Cadwell Park at the end of August left him with serious shoulder ligament damage, but he returned at Assen in Holland for the first Showdown weekend in style.

"I'm not the sort of person to give up, I think if you had sawn my leg off I would have got back on the bike somehow," he said. "We went there three-and-a-half weeks after major shoulder surgery with a second and a first. It was a surprise for everybody. We absolutely dominated the Showdowns. I raced when I needed to, I think I had four wins and three seconds. We didn't get to the front of the standings all season, but I'm a three-time champion."

Byrne took the lead in the standings for the first time this season in the second round of the Showdowns at Silverstone.

It put a certain amount of pressure on the Kawasaki rider but he found a way to relax – with the in-laws in the Czech Republic.

"I tried to remain as relaxed as possible, especially in the build up," he said. "We went to Czech Republic to see my in-laws. It's the one place in the world I get to really relax."

"I didn't take any phone calls, or cook, they really looked after us. It was like me and my wife were a freshly married couple again. It was nice to have some down time. I'm incredibly lucky, my wife's parents are lovely people, and being in the Czech Republic they don't see their grand children every week."

WINNER: Shane Byrne clinched his third BSB title

Canterbury captain is not expecting standard to slip

greg.miles@archant.co.uk

TAKING up the captaincy at Canterbury has given Susannah Townsend a new-found concentration on the pitch.

It's been a strange transition for the 23-year-old as she adapts to life as club captain, having taken over from Canterbury stalwart Mel Clewlow who'd held the post for 12 years.

While it's a big learning curve, she insists the added responsibilities aren't affecting her game, and instead are helping her, as well as helping Clewlow.

"It's made me concentrate more on the pitch. It's put me in a position where I have to speak up," she said. "Before if I was having a bad game I might have gone into my shell a bit, but now it's not just about me it's about everyone."

Although she understood what the role meant, she wasn't quite as prepared as she might have been for some of her duties.

"She (Clewlow) failed to mention that the captain has to bring the biscuits to home games for the away team and officials. It's those little things," she said. "It's not just about being captain on the field, it's all the other things like the sponsorship and the meetings."

"She was captain for 12 years so handing it over was a bit weird for her, I think. But she's playing some of her best hockey now because she can concentrate on playing."

"I said to Mel, 'am I going to find this hard', because she's always been my captain, and will always be my captain. I look at the squad now

Picture: ADY KERRY

LEARNING:

New Canterbury captain Susannah Townsend insists taking on the added responsibility won't affect her game, but improve it as her side start the season in good form sitting top of the table and I'm quite a senior player. I have to step up anyway even if I wasn't captain.

"I'm not going to do things exactly the same way as Mel. Everyone was used to her way, but I'm still learning and making mistakes."

She is optimistic after the start they have made to the season and is hoping for big things.

"I think we can win the league and get into Europe," she said. "It's exciting, we are definitely going to challenge."

They are currently top of the Investec Premier

Division, having won three and draw two before this weekend's game against Clifton. They almost surrendered their unbeaten run last Sunday as they fought out an epic 5-5 draw at Reading. They led 3-1 at the break, but the hosts pulled level three times.

Canterbury men are also on a good run of form and sit second in the Premier Division having won four of their five games, before this Sunday's game against Hampstead and Westminster.

Marsden leaves, but younger players are showing promise

AFTER overcoming an injury crisis, Folkestone Invicta boss Neil Cugley has now also seen Darren Marsden walk out on the club.

The 23-year-old midfielder who joined from Herne Bay midway through last season, last week told Cugley he didn't want to play at the Buzzlins Stadium.

It was a surprise to the 56-year-old who'd made him highest paid player at the club who are sitting second in the Ryman One South.

"He just said he wanted to get away," he said. "He's the highest paid player at the club. I mentioned it to the chairman, and we decided to let him go. We are disappointed. We are pushing towards the top of the league, it's a strange choice."

"When he first came he was outstanding. I don't think he's found the same form since, and maybe he's frustrated."

He praised the younger members of the squad who have proven their worth in recent weeks as Cugley's small staff have been hit with injuries and a stomach bug, as well as being limited by their financial plight.

"We will move on and to be fair the younger lads have come in and done well," he said. "I've been delighted with the way that the likes of Nat Blanks, Ryan Philpott, and Richard Atkins have played in recent weeks."

"We have got 10 days without a game now so I'm hoping we can get by. Once we get everybody fit we're not bad."

"It's no-one's fault but mine that we've been working with such a small squad. I've got away with it in the past, but this season we've had a string of injuries and been left virtually down to the bare bones at times."

MOTORSPORT

Jackson eyeing title as Brands gets set for BTCC

REDSTONE Racing will be hoping to make home advantage count this weekend as Mat Jackson chases the independent drivers' title in the last round of the British Touring Car Championships.

Two weeks ago at Silverstone Jackson delivered the first podium of the season for the Kent-based team run by Motorbase Performance. It's given him an outside chance of claiming the independent drivers' title in the final three races which take place this Sunday.

"Silverstone was a great achievement by all of the Redstone Racing team," he said. "The first win is always the hardest and now that we have achieved this, we can further improve and hopefully can challenge for more wins in the finale at Brands Hatch this weekend to round off the season with a high. We are under no illusion that it will be tough, but we like a challenge."

Meanwhile there are still four drivers in the hunt for the overall title. Former BTCC champions and old rivals Matt Neal and Jason Plato will both be aiming to overhaul title leader Gordon Shedden, who hopes to lift the famous trophy for the first time.

Andrew Jordan still retains an outside chance of become the youngest ever winner.

FOOTBALL

RESPECT: John Schofield is popular in the game

Friends reunited as Gills take flight to face Gulls in midweek clash

IT will be a case of friends reunited on Tuesday night when Gillingham assistant manager John Schofield meets his former boss.

Martin Allen's Gills take on Martin Ling's Gulls at Torquay's Plainmoor, in what promises to be an entertaining tie if last season's encounter is anything to go by. On that occasion Gills midfielder Chris Whelpdale netted a goal of the season contender in a 5-2 win last October.

This season's clash is a chance for Schofield to catch up with Ling, who employed him as assistant manager at Cambridge at the start of the 2010-11 season.

It proved to be an ill-fated seven months at the Blue Square Premier side as they lost their jobs in the first weeks of 2011 after a poor start.

"I met John on a training course many moons ago. We became good friends on that course and we have always talked to each other," Ling said. "When an opportunity to get an assistant in at Cambridge came about, John got in touch. He was out of work at Lincoln and suggested we might be a good partnership."

"The time there wasn't great, not because of anything John did though. We didn't have a good start and by the end of January in the first season we were asked to leave."

He pinpointed the energy that Schofield brings to the team as one of his greatest assets.

He said: "John is a brilliant coach, he's loves to be out on the grass, for me he was first class. He's worked with Martin [Allen] at three different clubs now, so that says it all really. I don't think he would ever be out of work long if he became available."

"You never see him without a smile on his face. Every single day he would bounce in and then bounce off to the training ground, and that makes managing a football team a bit easier."

Torquay have plenty of promotion ambitions of their own, having lost to Cheltenham in the play-off semi-finals last season, but they were 11 points behind the Gills before the weekend's fixtures. Despite Gillingham's incredible start with just one loss before this weekend's visit of Burton Albion, Ling knows his opposite number on Tuesday won't be putting his feet up.

He said: "Martin [Allen] will be the first to say there's only a quarter of the season gone and a big chunk left. It's a marathon not a sprint."

"You always get a hard game, and a hard handshake at the end."
